Most theaters are located in Michigan with 10 locations, mainly in the Flint/Tri-Cities area and the Greater Lansing area. [1] The group also operates in Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, New York State, North and South Carolina and Tennessee. Until 1985, Shiawassee County, Michigan did not have multiplex theaters. This changed when the Capitol Theater Owosso (now Lebowsky Center) closed. When it was discovered that the Capitol would close, Gary Geiger decided to build a multiplex theater in downtown Owosso that opened shortly theretime. [2] The first theater became, and remains, the headquarters of the NCG Cinema chain. In 1987, Geiger entered the Flint market by purchasing Clio Cinemas, which had been built in 1974. Alma Cinemas was built by Geiger in 1989, followed by Greenville Cinemas the following year. The Geigers consolidated their theater holdings under the neighborhood cinema group's branding in 1992, the year the Midland chain opened. By the end of the 20th century, two more theaters, located in Lapeer and Coldwater, Michigan, had opened. The 21st century saw NCG enter the Lansing market in 2002 with the location of their 18 flagship screens (NCG Eastwood Cinemas) at Eastwood Towne Center, followed by its expansion into its second state, Indiana, in 2005 with the opening of a theater in Auburn, near Fort Wayne. A year later, the chain completed a 14-screen theater located in Grand Blanc Township, Michigan, known as Trillium Cinemas. At the same time, most of their old theaters were refitted to include stadium-style seating, and some of them added more screens. [Citation needed] NCG Trillium Cinemas added an IMAX screen on November 15, 2007, bringing the number of screens in that theater to 15. [3] Soon after, the Geigers expanded south in Gallatin, Tennessee. [Citation needed] Following the closure of Clio Cinemas in March 2011[4] (which was to reopen in 2011 under the management of Emagine Entertainment), NCG leased the former National Entertainment theater at the Courtland Center in Burton. The theater, which has six screens, was completely renovated while carrying equipment from the former Clio site, reopening on May 20, 2011 as the NCG Courtland Center Cinema. [4] In 2008, NCG built a new 12-screen theater near Acworth, Georgia. In 2013, NCG acquires ten-screen cinema in Marietta, Georgia, from Regal Entertainment Entertainment The theater was renovated and reopened that year. [5] That same year, NCG Eastwood Cinema added its 19th screen, NCG's first X-treme screen (74 feet wide and three storeys high). [6] In 2013, NCG's first Illinois theater, Kendall Crossing 10, opened in Yorkville, Illinois. On January 14, 2016, NCG Cinemas took over the Lakeview Square Mall cinema, Lakeview Square 10, from the Carmike Cinema with plans to close immediately for renovations. [7] In recent years the chain has expanded to include theaters in Chattanooga, Tennessee, Metro Atlanta, the Chicago area, Indiana and South Carolina then building other buildings in North Carolina. On July 21, 2017, another location opened in Kingsport, Tennessee. The chain was tested to serve beer at its concession stand at the Midland theatre after renovations from January 7 to March 1, 2019. [1] In March 2019, NCG announced that beer would be launched to its location starting with its Lansing theater. [8] The cinema operator opened its first foray into New York state on April 19, 2019 with the opening of 12 theaters at the Hudson Valley Mall in Kingston, New York. [9] Mall management company Hull Property Group said the cinema would occupy enhanced space from the 12 theatres operated by Regal Entertainment Group which closed Regal on 16 August 2018,[10] five months to the day after Regal was bought by British cinema chain Cineworld Group. [11] In January 2019, NCG Cinemas agreed in January 2019 to lease space at Northeast Plaza on the Buford Highway in Brookhaven, Georgia in hopes of opening in November 2019. The previous plaza space was the Atlanta Peach Ballroom, a Latino nightclub, which closed in 2016. Before that, the location was a movie theater.
