Developer website App Support Privacy Aguardado desde outubro do ano passado, Crossy Road Castle - sim, um spinoff do clássico Crossy Road - acaba de aterrissar excludes no Apple Arcade. — Apple Arcade (@AppleArcade) February 27, 2020 Embora a desenvolvedora Hipster Whale tenha se inspirado bastante en game original, a jogabilidade do novo é um tanto diferente. Traga seus amigos e descubra até evil vocês conseguem chegar next divertido jogo com torre infinita! Continue subindo o máximo que você puds. Cada partida é diferente. À medida que você vai avançando no jogo, novos personagens são desbloqueados. E a Hipster Whale diz que pretend as atualizá-lo constantemente com mais torres e personagens. Crossy Road Castle está disponível imediatamente para todos os assinantes do Apple Arcade e roda em iPhones, iPads, Apple TV e também tem uma versão para Macs. Hipster Whale is known for zany mobile games such as Crossy Road and Pac-Man 256. And last Thursday it launched Melbourne, Australia-based studio Crossy Road Castle for Apple Arcade. It's the latest way that Apple is luring gamers to its $5 a month subscription service, and it will test whether its smooth drip, drip, drip of high-quality mobile games will help drive a new business model for games. The Apple Arcade title is available on iPhone, iPad, Mac and Apple TV. Crossy Road Castle is a co-op retro game that is a sequel to Crossy Road, one of the most popular mobile games of all time with well over 200 million downloads. The title is a bit like New Super Mario Bros., with classic Crossy Road characters instead. This is the first time the hipster whale has returned to the original figures in Crossy Road, ceo Clara Reeves said in an interview with GamesBeat. Above: Clara Reeves is ceo of Hipster Whale in Melbourne.Image Credit: Dean Takahashi What people think about with Crossy Road is its bright characters, intuitiveness, [simple play], and touch controls, Reeves said. We still have a very big player base. And this is the first time we're bringing the original Crossy Road characters into a new game. As a mother and a gamer, I wanted to play a game we could play across generations. Apple Arcade has more than 100 games available, and Cross Road Castle is one of many family-friendly games on the service. The original Crossy Road debuted in 2014 as a Frogger clone that was better and more be time than rival Frogger mobile games. Apple Arcade already has a Frogger in toy town game, but Crossy Road Castle is not equal in gameplay. Many of us have these memories of playing like old arcade games, Reeves said. So you go to the arcade and you crowd around an arcade machine and interactions that you have with each other are just as important as interactions you have with the game itself. I want my 4 old, my 8 year old, me, and my father to be able to play this game and be having fun at the same time. Gameplay Above: Crossy Road Castle features four-player co-op games. Photo credit: Apple/Hipster Whale It definitely sounds like an arcade game, with lots of beeps and sounds. I played some levels of Crossy Road Castle in multiplayer mode with Reeves. We sat on a couch and played it on a big screen TV via Apple TV. The three of us each controlled a character rendered in the classic 8-bit voxel style, which runs over two-dimensional levels. It was the first time I had played the game, but it was quite intuitive to move left or right or jump. You must avoid running into jaw-like teeth protruding from different walls through the colorful levels. As with New Super Mario Bros., if one of you makes it through the level and the other three die, you all move on to the next level. Each room is quite short, but it takes some skill to get through each section. We played with Xbox game controllers, which connect via Bluetooth wireless connections to apple devices. You can throw a party with multiple controllers on the same Wi-Fi network. You can play like a cat, a duck, a chicken or a horse. A game is as accessible as you can find on any gaming platform. We're focused on creating bright and fun and simple, accessible games that have broad appeal and bring people together, Reeves said. Through development, the focus that developed was the part about bringing people together. Unfortunately, when people think of games, they often think of them as antisocial things, which of course is not true. When you play games with people you really know, like friends and family, it's a real social interaction that you have there. And games have this power to be a very positive social interaction, and we wanted to focus on that. Above: The tone of this game makes it a Crossy Road title. Image Credit: Apple/Hipster Whale I liked a level where you were shot out of a cannon on another cannon and had to make your way above the level by making sure you were shot into the next cannon. I was missing a little bit in the skills department, so Reeves often cleared the level before I did. But I got the benefit of being pulled together after she cleared it. We had a lot of laughter and chatter while we were playing. In a way, the levels can be very difficult. You don't get a break when you die. So you have to hope that one of your four parties does it over and pulls the rest of you together. You can collect many coins and other special collectibles, as well as secrets. It makes everything replayable. It's a cheerful game that anyone can play, but it has a depth below that for people who want it, Reeves said. It's a pretty polished game, based on the short preview I saw. And it's pretty good for a team of 11 people who worked on it for 12 months. We're a very small company, but we don't have much pressure to publish right away, Reeves said. We're in a very lucky position that way. Sign up for GamesBeat's upcoming event: Driving Game Growth & Into the Metaverse On Friday, Apple Arcade, Apple's $4.99-a-month mobile game subscription service, released updates for five games in the App Store. The gaming service has updated a few games every week in tandem with releasing new titles for its growing catalog of over 120 games, which you can play on your iPhone, iPad, iPod Touch, Apple TV and Mac. The updates come ahead of Apple's Worldwide Developers Conference, which will take place almost next week. Here are more details about the updated games.
