Last updated on August 29, 2020 This is teacher day and this is the time when kids want to do everything they can to make their teachers happy. Gifts, cards, flowers and many other ideas can run if yours and your child's head are now, but wonder what it is that a certain thing is that the teacher will love it and keep it. You could go to a gift shop and buy something special for the teacher. But nothing is as special as a custom card made by the child. This is something that the teacher can truly treasure, appreciate, and always keep. So, encourage the child to use a personalized card that is sure to move the teacher to tears. When the child makes the card, sit next to it, as some ideas can do things like glue, which can turn out to be messy, or you need a needle or a pair of scissors. Plus, it can be a fun knitting experience for you and your little one. There are many creative ways in which your little child can make a Teacher's Day card to be the special mentor who plays a huge role in his life. These teacher's day greeting cards for kids can be for a child, or they can be a group effort as well. This card takes some time and accuracy, but the end result is absolutely beautiful. You are sure to surprise the teacher with the effort the little one has put in. What you'll need flowers/women's finger Paint Palette Brushes Chart Paper Sketch Pen How to find natural materials like leaves or flowers. Select the ones that are large and paintable. Ask your child to paint them and use them as stamps on a piece of cardboard folded like a card. You can even use vegetables, like women's fingers, which are cut into pieces. They make beautiful shapes that look very attractive. Let the dry. Ask your child to write a short personal note to the teacher inside. This is an activity that requires effort and a lot of patience. One thing is for sure, the teacher will be taken aback by the effort put in by the little one. What you will need needle embroidery toothbrush Paint Fabric Sketch feathers How to make a piece of fabric, preferably embroidery fabric, as Aida cloth, as it will be easier for the child to work. It is possible to sew a small pattern (filling patterns are very easy for children) Place the fabric on a sheet of paper folded into a sheet of table paper. Invite the child to write a small note in it expressing gratitude to the teacher. It's an effort your teacher cherishes for life. The nature-based card is warm and personalised and is a simple handmade card for teacher's day. I'm sure the teacher's going to waver. What you will need flowers Glue Chart paper Sketch pen How to collect beautiful flowers in your garden or wherever you can find them. You need to press flowers by keeping them in a book for a few days or months. The longer you keep them in the book, the better. To get started, fold the paper like a card. Put the pressed flowers on the card. You can use a little glue to stick this paper. You can also add a simple note inside the card. To make the flowers more relevant, the child can write something about how unique the teacher is than the flower. This is something that needs to be done with a lot of care, as the flowers tear, and the child may be a little messy with glue. Sometimes you just have to be creative, the things that lie around you. It's another handmade teacher's day that will surely win the teacher's heart. What you will need cookie cutters in different shapes paint disposable plate or tray Chart paper Sketch Pen How to make inks of different bright colors on a disposable plate or palette. Take the table paper and fold it like a card. Immerse the cookie cutter in the paint smoothly so as not to drip too much. Now press the cookie cutter on the chart paper to make nice shapes appear on the card. Allow the card to dry for a while. Encourage your child to write a personal comment to thank their teacher for the role he plays in his or her life. 3D cards are creative and fun. The teacher is pleased to see how far the child has gone to make him happy. This fun DIY Teacher's Day card requires your child to be around and helps him as there are a lot of cutting involved. What You Will Require Scissors Color Paper Chart Paper Glue Sketch Pen How to Make It You can ask your child to make paper cutouts of nice little things on colored paper. For personalization, cutouts can be based on the teacher's likes or even subjects such as mathematics or history. The cutouts should be glued to one end of a small strip of diagram paper Next, stick to the other end of the card. It can be inside the card that when the teacher opens the card, he or she is a pleasant surprise! You can make a variety of 3D elements like flowers or ribbons from side to side of the card, etc. It can be simple with very few words as well. Ask your child to personalize it, as the teacher will cherish their memories every time they open their card. The teacher was also impressed by the effort that went into it. Nothing replaces the memories captured in the photograph. This homemade card for the teacher will be so unique and special for both the teacher and the toddler. What you will need photographs paper glue small stickers Sketch pen How to make everything you need to do to get a good photo, preferably one for your child and teacher. Fold the paper like a card. Put the picture on the folded paper, right in the middle. Ask your child to decorate the card with paint and stickers. Tell your child to write a thank-you note with some happy memories that make the teacher giggle. Photographs are always special and carry a lot of memories. This handmade simple teacher's day card is something that the teacher is going to love. Don't be surprised if she shed a tear. We will require chart paper Sketch pens or markers Paint Palette Glue How to make a group of children to put together two diagram papers with tape or glue. You have to stick together so it's open into a card. Now you can be as creative as they want, painting on it and sticking photos. Children can take a layer of paint on their thumbs and press it on one side of the card. Invite the children to write a phrase or sentence under the fingerprints and thank their teacher for all they have done for them. Handprints are very personal and warm. While this is quite common, it's something that teachers love because it reminds them how unique each child is as a handprint. We will require chart paper Sketch Pens or Markers Paint Tray Glue How to make all you need is a tray/bowl of paint and a piece of chart paper folded like a card. You can stick to a single ink color, or you can get multiple colors. Ask your child to put his palm in the paint. Allow the paint to spread evenly over the palm. Then you need to press the toner on one side of the paper. Under the handprint, you can ask your baby to write down his name. He also added a special thank you note to the inside. It's something the teacher will treasure for a long time. 9. Felt Cards This is yet another super creative Teacher's Day card made by your kids smile. Help your child material because it has to be cut out very smoothly. What You Will Require How to Make It Felt is such a fine material that you can customize it the way you want. Cut the felt out of your child's favorite shapes. Some shapes that are cut out of flowers, hearts, ribbons, etc. now grab the sheet of paper and fold it like a card. Stick the shapes that are cut out, onto the card nicely. Within the card, ask your child to write a short, sweet thank you note. If you are using a lot of felt cutting, make sure that the thank you note is short and sweet. Zig-Zag cards are so unique and childlike. It can even look like a cute booklet if you add more pages. Your child can be creative with this project. You can add as many pages as you want to the card and let your child pour their heart out to the teacher. We will require paper scissor scale pencil sketch pen / pen Paint How to make it all you have to do is put a strip of paper and divide it into three parts drawing a thin line. Fold the paper on these lines alternately to the z-z shape. You can add more pages. You can now add multiple items to both sides of the card. For example, you can paint a picture on one side, write a short comment on the next page, and add a cute photo to the next page. You can also add fingerprints on one side to personalize it. Fruit cards can be as simple or complicated as the little man wants them to be, depending on the time and materials available. They are super cute and easy to make, especially for younger kids. We will need paper inks scissors Sketch pen How to make a sheet of paper and draw your child's favorite fruit on them. Give him the paints and let him paint each fruit. Alternatively, fold a sheet of paper in half and cut it in the shape of your child's favorite fruit. The little one can then paint the card. In the end, ask him to write a cute message to his teacher. It's a good mix between a card and a gift as a child teacher for sure to enjoy the sweet delights of tin, as well as the card that she feels loved. We will need tin or box cookies or chocolates Ribbon scissors paper paints Sketch pen How to place cookies or chocolate neatly in the tin or box. Cut the paper to the desired size. Ask your child to paint the card. In a sketch pen, ask the child to write some heartfelt lines about his teacher. She also draw some cute hearts and patterns. Instead of a standard card, your child can create a cute, personalized notepad. It's something your teacher is proud to use every day. We will require blank notepad Sketch pens ribbon diagram paper glue scissors How to cut the chart paper to match the cover of the notepad. Stick to the notepad glue and let it make Ask your child to write a cute note or message on the table paper and even draw something. Make a bow out of the tape and stick to the notepad. You can also tie the tape around the notepad. It's a creative take on the traditional card and something for the child teacher to hang on the wall or on his desk. What you will need any roll of felt material Markers Scissors Rope adhesive tape How to make cut the material in the shape of a roll. Invite your child to write a cute wish or gratitude to the teacher using the markers. He can even make a list of things he likes about his teacher. To create a border, hold the ribbon around the edges of the scroll sheet. The tape can also be cut and stuck in any empty area of the roll. Finally, stick at the end of the rope to the top edge behind the roll, so it can be hung. This card is cute, unique and easy to make. I'm sure the child's teacher will be super happy when she gets this. We will need blank card material or thick paper Sketch feather-thin, handcrafted paper Rope glue scissors Source: Pinterest How to make you love the card material in half. Cut the handmade paper into small rectangles. Fold them in half to create a triangular shape, but do not cut them. The child can place the folded rectangles on the rope and use glue at the end to stick them. Help the child with this step. Ask your child to write a comment on the card. Finally, stick to the end of the rope on the front cover of the card. Receiving Teachers Day cards for your child feels very special. So be sure to help your child as she works on her creative project with the person who is casting her life. Ask your child what he wants to do for the teacher. You can keep giving him different ideas of what is mentioned above, but also let him achieve something himself and put a personal touch to them. as it makes him proud and he will take ownership of what he does.
