How to hide my life events on facebook

David Harris, Product Manager Life Events facebook is a way to share, celebrate and get together around your most important milestones with friends and family. Just as they are in real life, the events of life on Facebook are different from other everyday moments. To make sure these moments stand out even further, we redesign this feature to provide more ways to commemorate the events of your life and help friends see these important milestones. Life events are a special type of post When we start reimagining the events of life, we talked to people all over the world to understand the stages of people's lives, how they share them and what role they play. We have heard that many people want to share and remember the great events of life, including difficult moments, such as the loss of a loved one. To help people do this, we provide new options, including animated photos and videos. If you don't have your own images, you can now choose from a variety of artworks from Facebook. You can also add photos from people or pages that you've tagged in a post, such as partner relationships, a new school, or workplace. Photos and videos also contain subtle animations, such as slow zooming. As before, when you create a new life event, you can add an icon that tells you your update. Come along with friends and family about your news The other topic we heard in our study was that life events can bring people together. Whether it be happy or more solemn, sharing an event in your life on Facebook is a way to announce your milestone to your friends and family, including people from your past who want to reconnect or stay in touch. Now, for certain types of life events, such as changes in the current city, work, education, and relationship status, your friends may receive a message that they won't miss your news. We filter messages to see only the most important messages, and you can also turn off these notifications at any time. When you react to a life event, other reactions and photos of friends who reacted animatedly to celebrate or mention the moment. The events of life are highlighted in your profile Finally, people have told us about how these moments shape who they are and serve as anchor points in their lives. To acknowledge this, we now highlight life events in a special profile section. This can help you learn more about your friends and possible relationships – and gives you a new way to remind and reflect on your big moments. You can choose to hide the event of life by tapping ... at the top of the record and selecting Hide from the timeline. Inspired by your we hope you will enjoy the updated, redesigned feature of life events, which will be in the coming days worldwide on iOS, Android and desktop. Make sure you have the latest version of Facebook install to test it. We look forward to people's feedback. In the meantime, here you will find some ways people use the events of life. After graduating from med school, getting involved, starting your dream job - these are life-changing events that you want to shout from the top of the hill. Facebook has met that need with its Life Events feature, but it has never felt like shouting from the hilltop until now. Facebook recently released an updated feature that makes your life events pop – literally. These posts can now contain photos from another page or a person tagged with it (such as your new job or partner), animated photos and videos, Facebook 3D photos, or photos from the Facebook gallery itself. There are many interesting new aspects this update provides for Life Events. I will pass through everything you can expect from your new Life Events record, and then I will provide step-by-step instructions (with photos) on how to use it! Here are some great new suggestions you can expect with updated life events. What do new Life Events look like? Life events existed as long as facebook time zone itself. So what is the big thing? The new Life Events rollout is designed to make these messages stand out because, well, they are kind of a big thing. Facebook knows that and wants to make these ads even more special by giving them some pizza. Photos As I said earlier, you can now add a wide range of photos. You can still upload your own, but now you can add cool animations, such as slow zoom. Tell your message tags another profile or page – as the school just got into or the partner just got married. Now you can choose from photos that exist on their page or profile as well! Talk about great personalization. If you do not like any of these options, you can choose from facebook offered animated art, which is really neat. You can also choose from a selection of icons that appear in the middle of the record. In the example above, it's paw printing. Messaging Facebook algorithm found out exactly what you are close to and what profiles or pages you want to regularly watch. And in the past, life events appeared only in your newsfeed. So you can't see that your old college friend who you no longer talk to regularly just got engaged in. Or – as Facebook admits, not all life events are happy – you can't see a life event about your high school teacher who just died. Now, Facebook will ping you messages about certain life events regardless of if the person is shown regular on your newsfeed. This means that you will not miss a single big moment - and no one will miss your big moments either. Not happy to get even more posts popping up on the screen? Here disable Facebook messages. Reactions Now that most of your friends have been about your ad, you will probably get a lot of interaction with posts. Likes, wows, hearts, tears. When someone interacts with the post, they will see a fun explosion showcased by all the likes, hearts, etc. that friends gave the post. Here's an example facebook has submitted in your ad: Timeline your time zone is changing as well to accommodate the importance of these posts. Now there will be a special section dedicated only to the events of life. In the past, it was difficult to find the events of past life. This new addition to your profile will give you a way to look back at all the excitement and curveballs life has thrown you. It will also give other people a way to get to know you, looking at the most important stages. If this makes you a little uncomfortable, Facebook offers a way to hide life events from your time zone. TIP: Immerse yourself in the Facebook activity log to see your full participation from the past day, week, month and even year! How to use the new Life Events feature Now when you know what you can do with this new feature, are you excited to write a new Life Event?! Me too. Let's go, like, step by step. 1. Go to the profile and select Life event Go to your Facebook profile. You can do this by clicking the humanoid icon at the bottom of the screen or the three-line menu button at the bottom right. When in the profile, look where you usually make the status. You'll notice life events under the What's in your mind? 2. Select the category from which your life event falls on Facebook, offering a variety of common life events from which you can choose. If what you want to share doesn't fall under any of these options, you can choose the last option to create your own. From there, another screen will appear asking you to further indicate what the event is. I choose Jobs and it was this screen. 3. Select your image(s) That's where the new features start kicking! Facebook offers filler images right away that you can store if you want. Or click the Photos/Videos link to choose from a camera roll or from the animated art that Facebook offers by the event. You can select as many photos as you want to represent the event. Here are the options Facebook offers based on the fact that it's a Work Life Event. And here are some shared feelings of images that Facebook offers: Pretty cool, right? Choose any option suitable for you and your big moment! 4. Select the New Living Events icon also allows you to select a small icon that appears directly in the middle of your post to symbolize the event. Click the icon (the original work category is a briefcase) to peruse the selections. Here's where you can choose from: 5. Fill in the fields and post! Fill in the rest of the record by adding all related profiles, pages, or locations and adding about the event. When you're done, click Next. The pop-up screen will ask you how you want to share the post. You can choose who sees it in your Facebook news feed. Then click Share. The life event is now on your profile under the new Life Events section, and your friends will receive the message you've posted! Life Events is a big problem! And now, thanks to Facebook's updated version, your big moments will look and feel like a big problem for the entire Facebook community. In addition, you will be better off keeping up and celebrating your connections. In general, a great update on Facebook. Want to know more about other new Facebook features?
