Fake call from forky prank call

Not including even movies, novel or mobile game, he has been the main character of seven full games, in addition to Hitman 2's Sniper Challenge missions. Earlier this year, Redditor u/iamtheguy55 counted how many people have officially killed at work, and the number is at least 347. Since Hitman games have to do with player choice, each player's actual number is different. Any level can be completed by simply pressing each NPC, for example. But to reach this number, u/iamtheguy55 counted the minimum number of NPCs the player had to kill to achieve a Silent Assassin rating in each level, which has been available in each game in addition to Codename 47. The number also reflects changes in the series. While subsequent games have offered many silent and non-lethal ways to take down annoying NPCs, Hitman: Codename 47 only provided its reliable fiber wire, which kills through strangulation. In previous games, even the furtive players still occasionally had to kill unsuspecting guards. Now, the final number of bodies depends heavily on the player.
