Enzymes are biological catalysts that accelerate reactions. They are specific to their substrate. The lock and the key hypothesis shape it. Enzymes are denatured at extremes of temperature and pH. The main nutrients needed for a healthy diet are carbohydrates, proteins and fats. The digestive system breaks down large food molecules, which are then absorbed into the bloodstream. Carbohydrates, proteins and lipids are biological molecules. They can be detected using chemical and physical tests. The genetic code of all life on Earth is made from DNA. Enzymes are biological catalysts that accelerate chemical reactions. Proteins consist of combinations of amino acids. Body proteins include structural proteins, enzymes, hormones and antibodies. The shape of an enzyme allows it to accelerate a biological reaction. Cellular metabolism is a series of catalyzmatic reactions that accumulate or break down molecules. Enzymes are affected by temperature and pH. Aerobic and anaerobic breathing produces ATP and heat. All living things are made of cells that are differentiated to perform different functions. Substances enter or exit the cell and enzymes are catalysts contributing to cellular metabolism. Metabolism refers to all chemical reactions that take place inside living cells. Single-celled and multicellular organisms must control their metabolism to survive. Enzymes are proteins that act as biological catalysts, which means they accelerate reactions without being used. Enzymes are biological catalysts that accelerate reactions. They are specific to their substrate. The lock and the key hypothesis shape it. Enzymes are denatured at extremes of temperature and pH.
