Wong won a Tony Award for his role as Song of Liling in M. Butterfly, becoming the only actor in Broadway history to win a Tony Award, Drama Desk Award, The External Circle of Critics, the Clarence Derwent Award and the World Theatre Award for the same role. He was nominated for the Critics' Choice Television Award for his role as Waitrose in Mr. Robot and received an Emmy nomination for Best Actor in a Drama Series. He is known for such roles as Dr. George Huang on Law and Order: Special Victims Group, Ray Mukad's Father on Oz, Dr. John Lee on The Awakening, Dr. Henry Wu in the Jurassic Park franchise, Hugo Strange in Gotham, and Ngapoi Ngawang Jigme in the film Seven Years in Tibet. Wong is the host of the HLN medical documentary series Something Kills Me with BD Wong. Wong also did extensive voiceover work and stage acting. The most famous of his voice roles is the role of Captain Lee Shang from the Disney animated film Mulan. He later responded to the role twice, in 2004 directly on the video sequel, Mulan II, and 2005 video game Kingdom Hearts II. Early life and education Wong was born and raised in San Francisco, the son of Roberta Christine Wong (nee Leong), the head of a telephone company, and William D. Wong, a postal worker. He has one older brother and one younger brother. He is of Chinese descent, with a family from Hong Kong. Wong attended Lincoln High School, where he discovered his love of acting and starred as a presenter in numerous school plays before enrolling at San Francisco State University. Wong's career received widespread attention as a result of his Broadway debut in M. Butterfly opposite John Lithgow. The play received numerous awards, including several for Wong, who at that time stopped using his full name in favor of his initials. He has since stopped using punctuation in his initials. He is notable as the only actor to be awarded a Tony Award, a Drama Desk Award, an External Critics' Circle, a Clarence Derwent Award and the World of Theatre Award for the same role. In addition to his long work on Law and Order: A special group of victims like FBI's PSYCHIATRIST Dr. George Huang, he had recurring roles in all American girls and as Mukad's father on all six seasons of Oz, with guest appearances on and Sesame Street. On the big screen, he appeared in The Freshman (1990), the 1991 remake of Father Father and its sequel 1995 , Father of the Bride Part II, Jurassic Park (1993), Executive Solution (1996) and Slappy and Stinkers (1997). He also provided the voice of Captain Shang in Disney's Mulan (1998), his direct-to-video sequel, and the video game Kingdom Hearts II. He returned to Broadway as Linus in the revival of You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown, along with Anthony Rapp, Roger Barth and Kristin Chenoweth, and the revival in 2004 of Stephen Sondheim's Pacific Overtures. In 1990, Wong objected to the actor's capital that a plan to use British actor Jonathan Price as an engineer in the Broadway run of Miss Saigon, which Price originated during the extended launch of the show in London, would take jobs from actors of Asian descent. Although the union banned Price from playing the role in response to Wong's complaint, Charlton Heston's vociferous opposition and threat to the musical's creator and producer, Cameron Mackintosh, to completely cancel the American production prompted the union to change course. Price won the Tony Award for Best Actor in a Musical for the role. In 2008, he starred in the one-man show Herringbone, in which he played 12 roles, at the McCarr Theater at Princeton University. He brought the show to La Jolla Playhouse in San Diego the following year. In 2012, Wong starred in herringbone in favor of Dixon Place in New York for two performances. The production, recorded live for a 2014 cd release, was his first appearance in New York to mark the 30th anniversary of the original New York production. In 2014, Wong starred in the American premiere of James Fenton's famous adaptation of The Orphan of zhao, a classic Chinese legend that traces its roots back to the fourth century BC, directed by Carey Perloff at the American Conservatory Theatre (A.C.T.). Orphan zhao is an epic story of self-sacrifice and revenge. After a political coup, a country doctor is forced to sacrifice his own son to save the last heir to a noble and destroyed clan. Orphan zhao was a co-producer with La Jolla Playhouse. Wong announced his retirement from Law and Order: SVU in July 2011 to join NBC's other police drama, Awake, in which he portrayed Dr. Jonathan Lee, a confrontational therapist for a Los Angeles police detective (portrait of Jason Isaacs), who lived in two reals. Wong guest starred in the thirteenth episode of Law and Order: SVU titled Father Dearest (which aired on May 2, 2012). In 2015, he was named a resident artist at La Jolla Playhouse. Wong Guest starred in NCIS: New Orleans Episode 1.13 titled The Walking Dead (which aired February 3, 2015), where he portrayed Navy Lieutenant Commander Dr. Gabriel Lin Wong also played the enigmatic Whiterose, head of the collective Dark Army, which lives a double life, as zhang, Chang, Minister of State Security, U.S. Network Mr. Robot. He was credited as a recurring role for the show's second season and promoted to main cast for the third season, which debuted on October 11, 2017. Beginning on August 13, 2017, Wong began hosting the new HLN Something's Killing Me With BD Wong series. The documentary explores strange and unexplained, real medical ailments and attacks that can be gradual or quickly descend. But in any case, if the cause and treatment are not found immediately, these real patients will die. Wong's charitable work donates its time and resources to a number of LGBT and arts-related charities such as the Ali Forti Center, Materials for the Arts, and the Rosie Children's Theatre, of which he is also a board member. Wong's personal life is openly gay. He began a long-term relationship with talent agent Richie Jackson in 1988. In 2000, the couple had twin sons, Boaz Dov, who died 90 minutes after birth, and Jackson Phu Wong through a surrogate mother using Wong's sperm and an egg donated by Jackson's sister.
