You'll find them all over fictional worlds, often taking some of the best traits from your parents. They tend to be as strong, resourceful, curious and ambitious as people, while having tuned senses, magic and love to the nature of the Elves. In terms of appearance, it is often difficult to say Pool Elf apart from the usual Elf. One only says that Half Elves can grow facial hair and that they have a greater ability to build muscle than elves do. The sides have a great charisma. As many races that do not belong completely are often avoided by both their human and forcing them to demand a place in society through diplomacy. This makes Pool Elves great communicators and wonderful travel companions. What's life expectancy for Half Elves? Dwarves are usually immortal and humans have relatively short lifespans. Depending on what universe you are in, half elves can be like either or sit somewhere in the middle. In the Midlands, for example, they receive the immortality of fairies by default, but they are given a choice in mortal life. In the Lord of the Rings, Arwen chooses it. In other universes, Half Elves is often not immortal, but they like (or suffer) a much longer life span than their human colleagues.10 random half-elf names to inspire you There are thousands of ideas in this tool. One of the most common problems with GMs and players in both is playing non-human characters is naming them. Most nonhuman characters cannot be named from the list of historical names, forcing DMs to create entirely new names. It's hard to come up with names that fit non-human characters and match each other. This is especially true of GM, who can find itself trying to come up with a large number of such names at short notice, but without relevant names, non-human characters often disconnect from their unique taste. Especially in the case of dwarves, it is important that the names represent and reflect the special attitudes and philosophies:elven's name generator below are presented to help with this daunting task. While it can't possibly represent all the possible names of a race as old and diverse as elves, this list can be a starting point and a quick way to create a great and consistent list of names. How it works: Each elven name consists of a prefix (table 2) and one or more sids (Table 3). These tables have definitions added to help define what a name means after you create. In the case of s secondary additions, male and female endings have been added, where appropriate. In some cases, alternative spellings are also provided. In some cases, the name of the official house may also be created by randomly rolling table 1B. These official house names would have been used by ancient jets, usually Grey or Gold Elf Descent. You can randomly generate an elven name rolling out table 1. You can also select the desired set of definitions and collect the corresponding name. If your character is a ranger who is fond of bears, you may decide his name should reflect this. Looking at the concepts, you decide his name means This results in the name Rethar, Reethar or Reithar. If you don't like a certain combination, try an alternative sing-up listed or add an a, e, i, l, r, s, including or apostrophe. While not every combination of prefixes and s followed-ups sounds correct, usually only a small change is required. If you can't make a specific name work, try with a similar meaning. If you didn't like Reithar, try the name, which means Bear Sister. If you have randomly created a name and do not like this definition, try changing the order of words. It is also possible to use the definition as a starting point for the meaning of the name. Definitions can often be combined in a poetic way to achieve better results. For three or more sibic names, try dropping one or more definitions. Anenfel can mean Hand of Autumn's s Lake, Lake of Autumn's Hand, Autumns Hand, or just Autumn Lake. Don't worry about two names that have the same meaning or have two definitions of one name. According to the Complete Book of Fairies, elven's language is so full of subtlety and nuance that only the native language fully understood. The two names may sound the same to humans, but the elf would know the difference table 1 (D10)D10Result1-4Roll once in Table 2 and once in Table 35-7Roll once in Table 2 and twice in Table 38-9Roll once in Table 2 and once in Table 3 first name, then once in Table 2 and twice in Table 3 with a different name 10Roll once in Table 3 , add an apostrophe, then roll once in Table 2 and twice in Table 3Relined Table 1B (D10)D10Result1-3Roll once in Table 4 and one table 54-5Roll once in Table 4 and twice in Table 56-7Roll once in Table 4 and once in Table 5, add the apostrophe, then roll back to Table 3.8-9Roll once in Table 4 and once in Table 5 first name , then roll the second name again in Table 1 in Table 1.10Roll once in Table 5, add an apostrophe, then roll once in Table 4 and once in Table 5Table 2 - Prefixes (D100){1} Ael : knight {2} Aer : the law that {3} Af : ring {4} Ah : crafty, cunning {5} Al : {6} Am : swan{7} Ama : beauty, beautiful {8} An : hand {9} Ang : glitter {10} Ansr : rune {11} Ar : gold, gold {12} Ar : silver {13} Arn : south {14} Aza : life, life {15} Bael : guard {16} Bes : oath {17} Cael : sagittarius, arrow {18} Cal : faith {19} Cas : herald {20} Cla : rose {21} Cor : legend, legendary {22} Cy : onyx {23} Dae : white {24} Dho : Falcon {25} Dre : Hound {26} Du : Crescent {27} Eil : blue {28} Eir : sharp {29} El : green {30} Er : Wild boar {31} Ev : Bachelor {32} Fera : champion {33} Fi : rain {34} Fir : dark{35} Fis : light {36} Gael : pegasus {37} Gar : owl {38} Gil : griffin {39} Ha : free, freedom {40} Hu : horse {41} Ia : day {42} Il : fog {43} And : staff {44} Jar : dove {45} Ka : {46} Kan : eagle {47} Ker : spell {48} Keth : wind {49} Koeh : earth {50} Kor : black {51} Ky : ruby {52} La : night {53} Laf : Moon {54} Lam : east {55} Lue : mystery {56} Ly : wolf {57} Mai : death, Killer {58} Mal : War {59} Mara : Priest {60} My : Emerald {61} Na : old {62} Nai : oak {63} Nim : deep {64} Nu : hope, hopeful {65} Ny : diamond {66} Py : sapphire {67} Raer : unicorn {68} Re : wear {69} Ren : west {70} Rhy (Ry) : Jade {71} Ru : dream {72} The Star {73} Rum : Meadow {74} Rid : Spear{75} Sae : Wood {76} Seh : soft {77} This : high {78} Sha : sun {79} He : age, time {80} Si : cat, cat {81} Sim : north {82} Sol : history, memory {83} Amount water {84} Syl : faerie {85} He : fox {86} Tahl : blade {87} Tha : vigil, vigilance {88} Tho : true, the truth {89} Ther : heaven {90} Thro : lore, sage {91} Tia : magic {92} Tra : tree {93} Ty (Try) : wizard {95} Ver : peace {96} Vil : finger, item {97} Von : ice {98} Ya : bridge, road, five {99} Za : royal {100} Zy : ivory Table 3 - suff {1} -ae (-nae) : whisper {2} -ael: large {3} -aer / -aera: singer's song {4} -garden / garden: mate, husband {5} -ah / -aha : wand {6} -aith / -aira : home {7} -al / -area (-la; Drow's name generator below is provided to help craft Drow's names, but it's important to note that Surface Drow may have names that are tougher and don't truly reflect their nature as their names also come from the tradition of millennials of evil. It's also possible that Suface's drowning will accept the mix, but Drow and Suface elf named traditions. Since this set of tables can not in any way represent all the possible names of the unlockable Surface Drow, this list, along with the Elven lists above, may be creating names that reflect this new naming conventioön as well as provide a decent starting point. These tables work pretty much the same tables above. Each drow name consists of a prefix (table 2) and one or more sids (table 3), followed by the name of the house consisting of a prefix (table 4) and one or more sids (Table 5). However, since all tables can be used, you are free to choose which tables these prefix and suffix will be generated from. These tables have definitions added to help define what a name means after you create. In the case of s secondary additions, male and female endings have been added, where appropriate. In some cases, alternative spellings are also provided. You can randomly create a Drow name by rolling in Table 1. You can also select the desired set of definitions and collect the corresponding name. If your character is a wizard who is fond of spiders, you may decide his name should reflect this. Looking at the concepts, you decide his name means Spider-Mage. This brings the name G eldrinna or G'eldree If you don't like a certain combination, try some alternate s followed-ups listed, or add a, e, i, l, r, s, sh, or apostrophe. While not every combination of prefixes and s followed-ups sounds correct, usually only a small change is required. If you can't make a specific name work, try with a similar meaning. If you didn't like G eldrinna, try the name, which means Spider-Sister. If you have randomly created a name and do not like this definition, try changing the order of words. It is also possible to use the definition as a starting point for the meaning of the name. Definitions can often be combined in a poetic way to achieve better results. For three or more sibic names, try dropping one or more definitions. Above all, Remeber, that these names may be a mixture of two naming substances and may not actually reflect the personality of the name A mixture of both personality and tradition
