Word connect app free download

ymgerman / ShutterstockBored with your apps and looking for something new? We've been rummaging through Google Play, iTunes and other app stores to find the best, saving you time. Here are the apps we think you need to look at this week. The sequel to the popular and award-winning sidescrolling action adventure game is finally here, if only on iOS. Badland 2 more or less feels just like its predecessor, tasks players with floating across the map, avoiding obstacles and surviving until you reach the end. What differs in the second iteration, however, is that instead of going only one to the right, you can now move in both directions. It still only includes a single player campaign, but there are global challenges so you can finish against friends through leaderboards. It's a bit expensive, it costs you $5. iTunes Popular storytelling app has finally arrived at Android. Storehouse lets you upload photos, video, and text to create a personalized story about anything. The neat part is that you can embed your story on blogs or share it with your friends and family. You can also browse other user stories. The features are pretty much identical to what you find in the iOS version, so there's no difference. Google Play iTunes Bumble is a dating app brought to you by Whitney Wolfe, one of the co-founders of Tinder, and its primary focus is on getting women to be the initiator. It works quite like Tinder in that it only connects people who have swiped directly at each other's profiles. What's different is that a woman needs to start a conversation within 24 hours before connecting is gone, and for same-sex connections, either person can start a conversation. Google Play iTunes Need movie recommendations? Your friends know you best, so why don't you ask them? That's what Tronco's about. It's a messaging app built on your friends recommending and discussing movies with each other. You can start group messaging threads or chat with one person. The app grabs its data using the TMDb API and allows you to rate movies on a scale of 1 to 10. Selfie recipients on iTunes Google Play will no longer have to rely on the front camera. Everyone knows that the rear camera offers better quality photography, and Elie is an app that lets you point the rear camera and take selfies without having to do anything. It recognizes your face and takes multiple pictures, but saves only the one you choose. It offers a number of other features as well as adding effects when shooting, not after. The app will cost you $3. Recommendations of iTunes' editors Malaria Gokey / Digital TrendsY looking for cool new apps to download? The choice is huge, so we dug our way through google play app stores, iTunes and other apps to find the best, saving you time. Here are the apps we think you need this week The image is a neat little small an iOS camera app that will breath a little life into your photos. All you have to do is post a picture using the app while moving the device smoothly in horizontal motion. Once the photo is taken, simply tap the subject of the photo and watch it turn into a video or GIF, add depth to the image and it really pops up. The result can be easily shared on Instagram, iMessage, Twitter, Facebook and other social media channels. The app will cost you $1.99 and great for iPhone owners who can't use Apple's own Live Photos feature, which is only on iPhone 6S. iTunes It can be difficult to track all your photos and Everalbum wants to help with that. The app provides secure unlimited backups of photos in the cloud and gets photos stored on your phone and social media accounts. The free tier saves them in high definition, but you'll need a premium version of the app to save them in full resolution. Photos are categorized by event, or you can create your own albums, plus you can invite others to upload their own photos. A similar feature has just been added to Google Photos. The premium version of Everalbum costs $9.99 per month, with the ability to print and send your favorite photos to your home. Everalbum works in many languages such as English, German, Italian and Arabic. iTunes Windows digital assistant, Cortana, has officially come to Android and iOS. Cortana, built into your Windows Phone and Windows 10 desktop, manages and displays your meetings, tracks packages, provides information about your flight, weather, and more. You'll need a Microsoft account, and if you're already using a Windows 10 device, Cortana is now syncing your data to your smartphone. In the Android version, you can use Hey Cortana to access the voice assistant from the home screen and also in the app. If you get a missed call, Cortana moves it to your Windows 10 PC, and you can answer the caller via SMS without having to pick up your phone. It's similar to iOS and Android with Siri and Google Now, but the more competition, the better. iTunes Google Play If you are into elegant, simple puzzle games to transfer time, the loop will be up to the aisle. The goal is to close the pattern to make a specific design on the screen, giving the impression that you are completing the circuit. It's easy to play, but really satisfying because the game doesn't say what shape to do, it pushes you to play around by tapping on pieces. It's quite simple and addictive, and supposedly endless levels would get you going for some time. iTunes Google Play If you're on the phone a lot, especially for work, you might want to check out HappyID. When someone calls you, the app shows you exactly who you're talking to by viewing contact notes and other key information. This could the company they work for, their name and so on. It is true that you will need to fill in this information when you first add a contact to your phone, but it could be worth the effort. The app can show notifications when a call ends and remind you to take quick notes about the conversation. It syncs with Evernote, which is useful and also has Android Wear support. Recommendations of Editors Google Play Pixabay / Pexels Unfortunately, not all applications for the SAT exam are created equally. Some of the SAT apps out there that you can download can be absolutely terrible, in fact. They can be full of glitches, expensive upgrades and incorrect answers. One look and you think, this isn't going to help me at all. Why did I bother? However, other applications are incredibly useful. The good news is that not every good app costs big money! Check out some of the best free sat apps to help you prepare for the big day. Maker: College Board User Ranking: 4.5/5 Stars Feature: If you like a little everyday kind of approach and are willing to start early, this app can definitely help. Here you will receive a question every day from all three sections of the SAT: mathematics, critical reading and writing. You can browse last week's questions along with answers and read a thorough explanation of any wrong choice. Bonus? The application comes from the manufacturer of the sat test yourself, the College Board, so you know the questions you're getting every day are spot on. Manufacturer: Faqden Labs User rating: 4.5/5 stars Feature: If you have a match with vocab and hate vocab cards, this app is just your thing. It is adaptable, which means it uses algorithms and web semantics to figure out the best way to quiz you. The more you exercise, the more the app learns about the types of vocabulary that trip you up. While it has only 290 words in the lite version, learning those 290 words will increase your chances of scoring high on SAT writing (including essays) and critical reading sections. Manufacturer: Score outside user ratings: 4.5/5 stars Feature: This app has a larger following than even the official SAT app! It replaced the Ace the SAT application, which was designed specifically for the mathematical part. SAT Up prepares you for each sat section with detailed analysis, detailed explanations and more than 400 questions. It also gives you a standard formatted SAT score at the end of each quiz and even a percentile score for students entering college of your choice. Manufacturer: Melon Express User Ranking: 4.5/5 stars Features: Previously $24.99, this app does not stay free for a very long time. Even at full price, this app is worth it because of the plus amount of tools: seven diagnostic tests, 4000 words, more than 1000 fully explained test questions and a ton more. Not only do you get real-time feedback, With SAT scores and time performance, you also get a baseline percentile compared to other application users. Plus, the user interface is a bit snazzy. There's nothing more boring than staring at an ordinary black-and-white app. This app offers colorful and vivid images to keep you interested. Manufacturer: Sourcebooks, Inc. User Ranking: 3.5/5 stars Features: While this app is just a one-time use a little deal, it's definitely worth downloading. Designed by Gary Gruber, one of the leading prep test experts in the country, the app aims to estimate the level of sat readiness based on 18 questions. When you're done, you'll receive the troubleshooting strategies you need to review and the SAT sections that could take advantage of more work. It's unclear whether 18 questions can determine your future score in its entirety, but it can certainly give you a reference point for future preparation. It's 2019, and no matter how much your overly hipster friend wants to tweet differently, mobile apps are as much a part of our lives as the ever-rising price of your morning latte. With over 2 million apps to choose from, tech-y options are limitless – but your precious phone battery certainly isn't. Then how do you know which ones you really have to have? If your idea of fun tries every app until you find the perfect combination to meet your daily needs, keep going. But for those who don't want to waste time browsing the App Store, we've collected a list of mobile apps to keep your day running smoothly, from waking up to bed. Get off to a good START Alarms Price: FreeBy now we know that hitting the snooze button for a few more zzz it doesn't actually give you more energy, and can start the morning at a pretty unproductive pace. So if you absolutely hate waking up in the morning, what are you supposed to do? Enter Alarms, an app that gets your ass out of bed - literally. There are three different ways to turn off an overly unpleasant alarm: shake, solve, or pin. Shaking your phone like a salt shaker for a given amount of repetition gives your forearm a mini-workout and gets blood flowing, making going back to sleep a little impossible. Solving a mathematical problem? Easy for some, harder for others, but still gets your brain cell kicking (and is definitely a better alternative to scrolling social media first thing in the morning). But the real benefit is the snap feature where you have to take a picture of a predetermined place in your house. When you're done with this, you're totally awake. Screenshot via Keelo/ShutterstockKeeloCost: Free, premium plan $12.99/monthMetezi walking, driving or public transport to the gym and back, struggling to turn on squat machines and trying not to embarrass yourself in front of Arnold Schwarznegger-bodybuilder-types, going to the gym in the morning seems hard passage. Fortunately, Keelo allows you to avoid all the headaches in gym life, while giving you more energy for the rest of the day through high-intensity, sweat-inducing exercises that can be done right in your home. No trouble, no questionable hygiene in the gym, just you and your sweat. And the best part is that workouts are under 20 minutes - perfect for squeezing before you start your day. Dark SkyCost: The $3.99Getting caught in the storm is fun in rom-coms, but not so much when you're sprinting home through puddles of water without an umbrella. With Dark Sky on the phone, however, there are no other excuses that don't know what it's going to fall from the sky, or the temperature, or anything else in terms of atmosphere. Dubbed as a hyperlocal weather app that uses robot technology to predict the weather, Dark Sky gives you exactly the minute it starts raining at the exact spot where you are currently. Screenshot via Stop, Breathe and Think/ShutterstockStop, Breathe & Think Cost: Free, premium membership $9.99/monthWhen the day hits 2pm, you get tired, distracted, and generally eccentric. But this app provides fast and accessible guided meditation to recenter your mind and body. Easy to use, Stop, Breathe & Think is built for all levels of meditating, from beginners to professionals. A text-based introduction to the app gives first timers the opportunity to learn the basics of meditation. During guided meditations, vivid images and relaxing sound help users tune the noise of everyday life. So whether you're recovering from a clash with a coworker or exhausted in the subway home from work, Stop, Breathe & Think can give you the inner peace you need to get through the rest of the day. Stuff 30St: $9.99 (for iPhone) Let's face it, there are hundreds of apps to help you manage your hectic workflow, but none of them are as thoughtful and flat customizable as things. Whether it's gathering ideas or organizing for a week in advance, things are a modern to-do list that lets you set timers and add events to your calendar with just a few taps. With Tonight, you can separate tasks that you can check off only at home, easily drag items from one day or list to the next, and add headings that divide larger projects into smaller tasks. To make it happen, the Stuff app has a very minimalist design, so your calendar already feels less crowded. It's all about how you FINISHScreenshot via Cocktail Flow/ShutterstockCocktail FlowCost: A free, premium subscription of $4.99/monthSocating a powerful drink on happy hour is fun. Chilling in your house after a long, tiring day behind the desk is also fun. Combine your two competing desires with Cocktail Flow, an app that teaches you how to invent a delicious drink right in the comfort of your own kitchen. Search for recipes by categories such as strength and even filtering by basic spirit you have at home. The free app saves you the cost of tipping a bartender and puts hundreds of different cocktail recipes right at your fingertips to create a small happy hour of your own - minus the crowds. Just WatchCost: FreeKeeping with all new releases on Netflix, Hulu, Amazon Prime, HBO, etc. is exhausting. And while it's tempting to give up and just watch reruns of Martin, just watch them, you can instantly check which titles have been added to each streaming service without the hassle of browsing the home screens yourself. Updated weekly, the application interface is easy and fast; simply select which streaming services you subscribe to and filter results by genre, date, and popularity. The days of IDK what to watch disappear (although finding a title both you and your roommate can agree on is still up to you). PzizzCost: Free, for a $9.99/monthIven subscription after the longest days, it can still be hard to relax, relax and turn off all the distracting thoughts that keep us awake. After that, it is Pzizz, a sleeping app that uses music, various sound effects, and a soothing voiceover to ensure you fall asleep quickly, stay in your REM cycle, and wake up feeling like a new person. Using advanced algorithm technology (that we won't even try to explain here), Pzizz creates a personal soundtrack that varies slightly every night, teaching your mind to combine these sounds with restful sleep. Sleep.
