Picture: Corbis/VCG / Corbis / Getty Images Grunge music is not just about wearing flannels and being depressed. The first grunge sounds came out of Seattle in the mid-1990s, but really gained popularity in the early and mid-90s. This subgenre of rock music was a sensation. Bands such as Nirvana, Pearl Jam, Soundgarden and Stone Temple Pilots broke through and showed the world that there was a type of rock music that was not necessarily metal and not necessarily psychedelic. This alternative sound resounded with the outcasts of the 1990s, and changed the way we saw music. Rock was no longer a fusion of country, blues and electronics. It became a pure sound that wasn't always perfect but always made a difference. The lyrics of these new sounds attacked society more than the government had targeted, as the music of a few previous decades had done. It was about looking at yourself and figuring out who you were. He attacked topics of self-understanding, bullying and inequality. Without a doubt, grunge changed the sound of music for an entire generation, and for good reason. The music was pure, the voice was passionate and the lyrics were poetry. It was so popular that the genre lasted more than a decade with fans around the world. To make your mornings a little livelier and brighter, experts from streaming service Spotify teamed up with music psychologist David M. Greenberg to compile a list of the best songs woke up. All songs have strong rhythms and positive lyrics, which Spotify decided to be important to be excited in the morning. They also start gently and then build, rather than being loud and abrasive from the get-go – an advantage when you're the type who really needs some coaxiality to get out from under the sheets.
