The arena is about a block from the Baltimore Convention Center on the corner of Baltimore Street and Hopkins Square; it is also just near inner harbor. It seats 11,100 and can be expanded to 14,000, depending on the event. Arena is owned by the city of Baltimore and is currently managed by private management company SMG. The arena officially opened on October 23, 1962. [3] Ag Odell Jr. and Associates designed it[4] at the site of the Old Congress Hall, where the Continental Congress of the Concert Hall met in 1776. As a cornerstone of inner harbor restoration during the 1980s, it was reopened after renovation and was renamed Baltimore arena in 1986. Mariner Bank, which acquired the arena naming rights for 10 years. It was reported that the Mariner Bank pays the city $75,000 a year to maintain the naming rights complex. When this naming rights agreement expired in 2013, the arena was briefly returned to the Baltimore Arena namespace until Royal Farms acquired naming rights in September 2014. [2] This transaction calls on Royal Farms to pay $250,000 a year to the city for five years, and gives Royal Farms the first right to renew or restructure its business at the end of the contract, or if the city builds a new arena. [5] In 1961, a vault was laid with the cornerstone of the arena with a message that contained reports from the then U.S. President John F. Kennedy, then Maryland Governor J. Millard Tawes, and then-Baltimore Mayor J. Harold Grady. The vault was opened in 2006. The current site that was chosen by the Baltimore Civic Center was not actually one of the many sites in 1955. Among the nine proposed sites were two druid hill park, three at the end of the Inner Harbor basin (where the World Trade Center and Harborplace are now located), and one in Clifton Park. [6] History 1960-1970-1970 There have been many events in the arena, including music, boxing, wrestling and other sports. From 1962 to 1976, the Baltimore Clippers of the American Hockey League played their home games on the Arena. The financially troubled Clippers ceased operations mid-season in 1974-75 when the professional Baltimore Blades (moved Michigan Stags) from the World Hockey Association (WHA) moved to the market/arena. The blades folded at the end of the season, and the Clippers regrouped for one last AHL season in 1975-76. Arena has hosted two other AHL franchises: the Baltimore Skipjacks ran from 1981 to 1993, and the Baltimore Bandits played two seasons from 1995 to 1997. In 1962, Arena hosted a boxing match between Joey Giardello and Johnny Morris. Also in 1963, Arena became the home of the Baltimore Bullets, who played there until 1973. The Beatles performed at arena on September 13, 1964, to a total of 28,000 attendees for two performances on the same day, 4:00 and 8:30 pm. On April 3, 1965, defending WWWF champion Bruno Sammartino defeated Gene Kiniski in a return title match. Just a few months later, in January 1966, Kiniski won the National Wrestling Alliance (NWA). In 1966, Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. addressed Race and the Church before gathering Methodist Lagiers at the Baltimore Civic Center. [7] The NBA All-Star game was played in the arena in 1969. The venue also hosted Led Zeppelin several times in the early 1970s. A couple of scenes from Led Zeppelin's concert film Song Remains the same was filmed behind the scenes. On June 13, 1970, the Jimi Hendrix Experience played at the Civic Center with a last minute decision to visit from New York and sold out. It was marked as one of the best performances of the entire 1970s tour and was one of the last shows Hendrix played before his death a few months later. Chicago performed at the Civic Center on September 4, 1971, a month before the release of its fourth album, Chicago at Carnegie Hall. Elvis Presley played in the Civic Center twice: Tuesday, November 9, 1971, 8:30 p.m. (wearing the Red Lion Suit) and again on Sunday, May 29, 1977, 8:30 p.m. (wearing a Mexican Sundial Suit), less than three months before his untimely death. Both shows were complete sell-outs. Grateful Dead's performance, September 17, 1972, was recorded and later released as Dick's Picks Volume 23. It contains a full concert, except for the encore, which was another Saturday night. It contains the longest CD version of the Other One, so far, almost 40 minutes long. In 1974, the World Team Tennis The Baltimore Banners played their home games there. World No.1 player Jimmy Connors was on this team. After Connors defeated Ken Rosewall at Wimbledon they played each other in the arena with repeated hair. Billie Jean King and John Newcombe both played in the arena, with their respective WTT clubs. The Civic Center was host to the 1974 and 1975 MEAC Men's Basketball Tournament. In 1975, professional basketball briefly returned with the American Basketball Association (ABA) Baltimore claws. Memphis Sounds moved to Baltimore after the 1974-75 ABA season and was first called the Baltimore Hustlers before changing his name. Troubled financially from the beginning, Claws folded after three road show games. [8] On April 30, 1977, superstar Billy Graham defeated Bruno Sammartino for the WORLD Heavyweight Wrestling Title. The 1980-1990 Arena was the home of the Major Indoor Soccer League's Baltimore Blast since their arrival in the 1980-1981 season until the league folded in 1992. Blast won its only championship in the 1983-84 season, which took place on top of 11,200 fans. The blast, regardless of the incarnation, was the longest serving tenant in arena history. In 1986 the popular Italian opera singer Luciano Pavarotti was the scene. Van Halen performs at the Arena on July 22, 1980 as part of the van Halen World Invasion Tour. Bon Jovi performs in a sold-out Arena crowd during the Slippery When Wet Tour on December 29, 1986. Def Leppard performed at arena on October 9, 1987 during the Hysteria World Tour. Arena was home to the Major Indoor Lacrosse League (MILL) and later the National Lacrosse League (NLL) Baltimore Thunder from 1987 to 1999. The Thunder won the inaugural MILL Championship. Notable players included Gary Gait, Tom Gravante (head men's Lacrosse coach at Mount St. Mary's University) and Hugh Donovan. Arena was a frequent venue for Jim Crockett Promotions (NWA) and World Championships in Wrestling (WCW). Starting in 1988, the Great American Bash pay-per-view was held at the Arena eight times. It also hosted the SuperBrawl V in 1995. Stings defeated Ric Flair to win his first NWA World Championship in 1990's Great American Bash, and Ron Simmons upset Big Van Vader in 1992 for the WCW title, becoming the first African-American to hold a major world title. NWo was reformed in 1999 at Baltimore Arena with Bret Hart, Kevin Nash, Scott Hall and Jeff Jarrett for Nitro after Stargade Arena has also hosted many WWE events over the years. In particular, 1994 King Ring, No Mercy (2003), No Way Out 2006, Backlash 2008, Extreme Rules (2010), and TLC: Tables, Stairs and Chairs (2011), as well as several Raw and SmackDown! tapings. Major name changes to be held at the Arena include superstar Billy Graham over Bruno Sammartino in 1977 for the WWWF Championships Tito Santana over Greg Valentine in 1985 for the WWF Intercontinental titled steel cage match. In 1989, the U.S. National Figure Skating Championships were held in the Arena. Three years later, the International Olympic Committee held the U.S. Olympic gymnastics trials there. In 1995, the NCAA Men's Basketball Division played 1 (round 1 and 2). The NBA Washington Bullets played some home games at Arena during the 1990s. Their final game at Arena was a 94-87 victory over the Dallas Mavericks on March 29, 1997. The team has yet to play a game in Baltimore under its current Wizards moniker. The 2000s Arena is also a staple on PBR's Built Ford Tough Series bull riding tour. On December 3-4, 2004, the final minibus Triple Crown Of Freestyle Motocross events took place in the arena. On February 1, 2006, the Arena held its first Concert of the Rolling Stones in Baltimore since 1969, which was also in the Arena. On February 19, 2006, No Way Out 2006 was held in Baltimore, the WWE's first pay-per-view city since No Mercy in 2003. Kurt Angle defeated the businessman to save the World Heavyweight Championship. It was chosen as the site of the 2006 Miss USA Pageant. On February 11, 2008, Arena also hosted a rally for presidential candidate Barack Obama. On April 27, 2008, backlash in 2008 took place in Baltimore. Triple H defeated Randy Orton to win the WWE Championship. On November 20, 2009, Bruce Springsteen & E Street Band performed at Arena, recreating the whole of their landmark album Born to Run; it was their first travel stop in Baltimore since 1973. The arena has stopped in several countries of pop music animals, including Carrie Underwood and George Strait. league sports. [18] However, on November 12, 2010, with the recession rebounding, Mayor Stephanie Rawlings-Blake announced that city officials are considering new locations for a new arena. The plan called for the Royal Farms Arena to remain open, but a new arena was built. While Rawlings-Blake believed that the new Arena would most likely be erected on the city's West Side, the Greater Baltimore Committee proposed building the Arena as an extension of the Baltimore Convention Center to help rebuild the Inner Harbor. [19] Costs could range from $750 to $930 million as it includes an 18,500-seat Arena, a 400,000-square-foot (37,000 m2) expansion of the Baltimore Convention Center, an underground garage, and a new 500-room Sheraton hotel; the proposed Arena site is where the current Sheraton hotel relaxes. [20] On 14 January 2015, David S. Kord, Chairman and CEO of Koršu Company, build a 15,000-16,000-seat arena, but build in the light of expanded capacity. The arena, housed in an outdoor amphitheater and pedestrian bridge to connect Inner Harbor and Federal Hill, would cost $450 million and tie up with Harbor East and Power Plant Live. [21] However, the Corus proposal was scrapped when Maryland Governor Larry Hogan canceled the Red Line project, which was badly needed for the arena. On 3 August 2016, the convention centre/arena proposal resumed. Up to this point, some more research has been planned on the new arena, including possibly the renovation of the Royal Farms Arena and the construction of a new arena at the city's National Centre Station. [22] On November 25, 2020, the Baltimore Development Corporation called for proposals to rebuild the arena to state-of-the-art facilities, either by renovating or building a brand new arena. The warning is that the arena must remain in place and that no proposals on alternative sites have been considered. [23] The Royal Farms Arena is right next to the Baltimore Light Rail stop at the University Center/Baltimore Street. Charles Center Metro Station and many bus lines are also nearby.
