Some time before the series, a janitor was cleaning at an experimental laser testing facility and was singing. In doing so, he saw a grain of dust on a keyboard attached to the laser and cleaned it causing it to malfunction and send a beam into space. The beam jumped from a satellite and hit a large processor that connected to conqueror and gave Maldark life in the game, causing him to escape. Later, while Neverfail ([[Dante]], [[Wyatt]], and [[Lyle]]) were playing Conquerer, they accidentally destroyed a firewall in the form of a Dragon and pulled a stick that made a path for the monsters to escape through the firewall. This freed Maldark who sent his servants to conquer the real world. Neverfail defeated many [[leaks]] and found [[Max Ross]] an eccentric multimillion-dollar game designer. I never failed Max Ross to help them, but Max disagreed. So Maldark leaked his lieutenant, Sprague into the real world. Sprague kidnapped Max Ross and took him to the eROSS Facility so Sprague could leak Maldark into the real world. Neverfail, including [[Angie]], was restored and went to the eROSS facility. They saw Sprague forcing Max to leak Maldark. Sprague saw Neverfail enter the facility through surveillance cameras. Sprague responded, but was killed by Neverfail. He never failed to confront the real Sprague, but it was too late. Maldark leaked into the real world. He threw magic bubbles that pushed Neverfail throughout the facility. Max Ross told Neverfail about the secret weapon. Neverfail used the secret weapon and sent Maldark back to the game world, and the firewall was reinstated by Max Ross. There's no way of knowing when Maldark will come back with revenge, but still keep sending minions.
