(Photo: Shutterstock / Mustepisara) An important new WhatsApp security feature is being rolled out to iPhone users right now. If you own an Android phone, you've probably already received an update that allows you to send suicidal messages, and now Apple fans will get the option too. Messages sent with a new feature (officially called lost messages) will be automatically deleted from the recipient's phone after seven days. At first, it seemed that users could choose how long the message would last before deleting, but WhatsApp decided to make things as simple as possible by fixing it after a week. However, there are a few important warnings that need to be noted; if the recipient of the lost message does not open WhatsApp for seven days, the message will be deleted from the conversation, but it may still appear in the notification area of the phone. If a person receives lost messages and then forwards them to a conversation where the lost messages are disabled, it will not be deleted. If a person responds to a disappearing message, the original message is quoted and the quoted text may not disappear after seven days. Finally, if someone receives a lost message and then backs up their messages, the lost message will not be removed from the phone until the backup is restored. Now you can see it... Experts at WABetaInfo noticed the disappearing messages on the iPhone, which specialize in ripping out WhatsApp beta releases to find potential new features that are in development but not yet available. If you want to be the first to try new tools like disappearing messages, you need to join one of WhatsApp's beta programs. Unfortunately for iPhone owners, the program on Apple devices is full right now, but it's worth keeping an eye on the Testflight page to see if the mode opens. To join the Android beta program, visit the WhatsApp beta page on Google Play and enter your details. If you have already installed the public version of WhatsApp, it will be updated to the beta version automatically within a few hours. The best free iPhone apps of 2020 and the best free Android apps Two of the most powerful brands in the digital world are getting an ID. According to a new story by The Information's Alex Heath, Facebook is rebranding Instagram and WhatsApp as Instagram from Facebook and WhatsApp from Facebook. A Facebook spokesperson confirmed Heath's reporting and explained that the company wants to be clearer about the products and services that were part of Facebook. More specifically, Heath says the exchange was carried by Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg's frustration that the company he founded doesn't get enough credit for the popularity of Instagram and WhatsApp. It is true that many fans of these apps do not pay attention Owns them: Heath points to two 2018 surveys that found that more than half of Americans were unaware of their connection to Facebook. But that long relationship between weapons has long been seen as a resource for all concerned. A few years ago, when teenagers decided that Facebook was no longer cool, the story goes, they showed their disapproval by rejecting it - Instagram.In in favor of the past, the independence of Facebook affiliates was more than the depth of the skin. After buying Instagram in 2012 and WhatsApp in 2014, the company left the founders of startups in charge, encouraged them to maintain their own cultures, and generally seemed content with their brands remaining independent, even though the mothership offered many back office functions – from advertising sales to server infrastructure. But now the founders of Instagram and WhatsApp have all quit, with dissatisfaction with meddling with Facebook playing either an explicit or reported share of their defections. And while details are still scarce, Mark Zuckerberg has waxed a visionary of a new era in which Facebook, Instagram and WhatsApp are all more closely integrated into the user experience, covering all three services. Even before such integration is obvious, Facebook is preparing it. Heath's The Information report reports that the Instagram team working on the service's direct private messaging capabilities will be folded into the group responsible for Facebook's Messenger service - consolidation that would have been unlikely in the past. It's hard to understand their motivation for this other than to assume that they simply don't realize that Facebook's brand is dead. It would be advisable for them to mute Facebook's business name to Instagram. – Brent Vanderbrook (@vanderbrook) August 2, 2019 Twitterverse's intestinal reaction to rebranding has been a feisty thumbs down, which is not a shock. (Some raised the question of whether Facebook is trying to digest its components before antitrust researchers can break them down.) However, the new naming confederace may have limited long-term significance. After all, the drizzly masses of real people don't start conscientiously referring to Instagram Facebook or WhatsApp Facebook. At best, they pay a little more attention to the Facebook connections of the two apps. And in the world of technology, branding decisions stem from corporate strategies have not sticked. More than a decade ago, Microsoft went through a period of suppression of the Windows brand in addition to its online efforts, leading to brands as skeptic as Windows Live Search and Windows Live Hotmail. They lasted only until other priorities came out on top, making Windows Live Search Bing and Windows Live Hotmail The chances that anyone – including Facebook – will talk about Instagram Facebook and WhatsApp Facebook in a few years' time will be slim at best. WhatsApp has recently added a Labels feature that allows its users to send different stickers when chatting just like other instant messaging apps. In the latest update version 2.18, users will now see a new option in the emoji section of an app called Stickers. At the beginning, the update comes with only one package of labels when preinstalled. However, the built-in sticker store allows you to download more, the store also has the ability to download stickers from the Google Play Store. Although there are several third-party label packages available, it still lacks good stickers that you might want to use. So why not create your own stickers and use it. Well, if you are looking to create your own labels, follow our step-by-step guide. Prerequisites: The latest version of WhatsApp (2.18) or above Internet Connection First step: Creating an image without a background The first thing you are supposed to do is click on the images with the expression you want and convert it to PNG file format without background. To do this, open your smartphone camera and click on some of the images, and now convert them to PNG file format without background and then add them to WhatsApp. So, here's how to convert your image to PNG with or without a transparent background. 1. Open the Google Play Store and search for any background towel app 2. Now, open all the images that you want to convert to Sticker 3. Remove the background and crop it 4 respectively. Save image in PNG format (because WhatsApp only supports PNG format for Stickers) Note: Create at least three images because WhatsApp does not allow a label package with fewer than three images. If you have completed the above steps, download another app called 'Personal Stickers for WhatsApp'. 1. Download the app and open it 2. The app automatically detects all labels you create 3. Tap the More button next to the label 4. Again, tap on the 'Add' option when prompted When you are done, open WhatsApp and go to the Stickers section by tapping on the Emoji icon on the left side of the Text Box. Select the Labels option and locate the labels you added. Tap it to send. Khamosh Pathak You can use WhatsApp for everything from talking to family and communicating with someone you met at a conference. But what if you want to send a quick message to someone who is not in your WhatsApp contacts on iPhone? This is how it works. To send a message to someone, WhatsApp requires you to add them as a contact first. Fortunately, there is a workaround. Shortcuts allow you to skip the process and start a conversation with any phone number (because they are on WhatsApp). Shortcuts are built-in by Apple iPhone and iPad. It allows you to create automation or import only automations created by community members. We will bring a ready-made shortcut to this guide. RELATED: What are iPhone shortcuts and how do I use them? Before you begin, you must enable unreliable shortcuts because you are downloading a shortcut from the Internet. To do this, open Settings and go to the Shortcuts section. Here, tap the switch next to Allow Untrusted Shortcuts. In the pop-up window, use the Allow button to confirm. To enable untrusted keyboard shortcuts, enter the device passcode from the following screen. We are now ready to set up a new shortcut. Open the WhatsApp Unsaved Number quick link in Safari on iPhone. Tap the Get Shortcut button to load the page. iPhone opens Shortcuts. Scroll down to the bottom of the windows, then tap the Add Unreliable Shortcut button. The shortcut will be installed. Now, in Shortcuts, go to the My Shortcuts tab and tap the WhatsApp Unsaved Number shortcut. A shortcut asks for a phone number. Provides a time for you to type the full number, including the country code. Make sure you only enter numbers of waste, not editors such as + or (). So if you're sending messages to someone in the U.S. and their number is 987654321, type 1987654321, then tap the Done button. The Shortcuts app opens WhatsApp with a new conversation to the number you specify. You can't see the contact's name at the top. Instead, all you see is a phone number. You can now write a message and send it. Later, if you want, you can save the contact. Do you use WhatsApp frequently? Learn more about how to protect your WhatsApp account.
