Letterboxd top 250 horror

Providing some Halloween fun from his own this month, Letterboxd just shared a list of the 25 best-rated horror movies on his website, starting October 24 and compiled based on real user ratings. The first handful of films shouldn't be a big surprise, including Psycho and The Shining, but the list has some amazing movies in it. Letterboxd explains: Don't stab or stab us, these are calculated from your ratings of all feature films tagged in our horror genre, as of October 24, 2018. It's an extensive list, with some perhaps surprising omissions, for example, the original Halloween, Night of the Undead and Evil Dead 2 all just lost the cut. Find the full list below, along with some Letterboxd observations. Although there is some genre crossover (in comedy with Young Frankenstein, mockumentary with What We Do in the Shadows and One Cut of the Dead, and zom-rom-com with Shaun of the Dead), these films are categorized as horrors by us (and IMDb). In the battle of the great decades of terror, the terrifying sixties win with seven films, more than five films from the seventies and three of the eighty evil. Scream at the twentysomethings, with three movies. By country, the United States has most of the films on the list, but Japan ranks second with four, Germany has three and France, Sweden and the United Kingdom are represented with two each. India, New Zealand and the Czech Republic also make the cut. The darkest film on the list (from a Western perspective) is Manichitrathazhu, by Kerala-born director Fazil, seen by just over 250 members. All directors are uncles. We can't make excuses for that, but we can point out that behind the scenes and on screen, women played important roles in these films. The Phantom Transport, for example, is based on the novel by the Swedish Selma Lagerl af, who in 1909 was the first woman to win the Nobel Prize in Literature. And what would Jaws be without Verna Fields' editing prowess? There are five films on this century's list, some of the color directors, including Jordan Peele, Jemaine Clement and Taika Waititi. Roll in the 21st century of horror. In that case: this top 25 is based on member ratings, but we also have a popularity index, based on the large amount of activity for each film regardless of rating, which produces a very different list, greatly favoring the 21st century. See letterboxd's blog for more information on this year's findings. 1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22 23 24 25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33 34 35 35 37 38 39 40 41 42 43 44 45 46 47 48 49 50 Published 2019-05-14T22:43:39Z Updated 2020-12-27T19:44:46Z An accompaniment to Letterboxd's Top 250, which sadly contains very few horror films.
