Snapchat support snapstreaks disappeared

Without streaks, I would have deleted Snapchat a long time ago. Snapchat features make me feel involved in my friends' lives, even if they are miles away. After unwittingly creating streaks with almost all of my friends, I'm at a stage in my life where Snapchat streaks are exclusive to a few. Continuing my streak has always been my top priority. But there was an inevitable situation where I lost my Snapchat streak. Thankfully, there are ways to recover streaks on Snapchat. The Snapchat streak starts when you and your friends send snaps directly to each other and continues to do so for more than three consecutive days. After this, a fire symbol (🔥) appears next to the person's name, and the number of consecutive wins after that is displayed. Snapchat gives awards to users with special emojis that exceed certain streak thresholds, such as mountain emojis and 100 streak emojis. The Snapchat Streak Rule Snap Streak Count continues while you and your friends send snaps to each other within a 24-hour time frame. And by snapping, we mean taking a photo/video and sending it to a person. Note that the ones listed below don't count as Snapstreak snaps - content sent via SpectaclesSnaps that send photos/videos that send chats or stickers to a group from your camera roll are likely to show different emojis as you continue your snap streak over the months, but it's important to note that the hourglass emoji (🕒) next to the person's name. This means that your Snapchat streak with them is close to expiring. If so, send a snap or ask the person to send the snap. How to restore lost Snapchat streaks? Snapchat is a good way to remember if your streak is about to break, but sometimes it can't help it. And if it breaks, the standard procedure is to build a streak from scratch.
