Ice princess from sharkboy and lavagirl with glasses

The ice princess is a character in Max's dream and a citizen of Planet Drool. She is the guardian of the Crystal Heart, which she wears around her neck, and the sole guardian of The Land of Ice. She's the dreamy world mate of Marissa Electricidad. The look of the Ice Princess is a young girl with long, curly blonde hair and blue eyes. She has lustrous makeup on to add to her ice motif. She wears a long, one-shoulder white dress with circular shapes. He wears white leggings and white shoes. The princess has sleeves with intricate shapes from upper arm to wrist. She wore a crystal heart necklace and two crystal earrings, similar to that of the look. The princess wears an ice hose. It has many snowflake designs and stacks of crystals. The princess's personality is generally calm and collected. Despite being at Max's age, she appears to be mature (and illustrable for the role of princess). This may be due to her generally isolated life in The Land of Ice, because of her upbringing or the idea that she is supposed to have an icy exteriment because of her powers. The ice princess was calm when she confronted a group about the theft of the Crystal Heart. Nevertheless, it seems that she can be happy/fun (more specifically, when Max saw without much thought through the lure of Crystal Hearts). History The background about the princess is not much, nor its name. She was first introduced to Sharkboy when he recounted the rumours (that she was beautiful) and lavagirl's own storytelling (that she was selfish, cold and cruel). Her icy powers come from her real life companion, who is always cold. The princess appears to have a protective father (Ice Guardian) and a protected life in the land of ice. With the Crystal Heart, she is the only protector of the land of ice and castle. It suggests she never left the castle and never will. Plot The Princess gives The Crystal Heart to Max to stop time to stop Minus. The power and ability of the Princess is not displayed on the screen. It's just a hint that he's the only one who can use the Crystal Heart and all its power after the expansion. In the position of protector it is possible that he has several abilities that are not displayed. Because of the princess's position, she has power over the citizens in the land of ice. She seems to be the only one who has overtaken her, the Ice Guardian, her father (and therefore the king). Max Max's relationship was the only one from the main group who spoke to the princess (because of lavagirl he was frozen solid and Sharkboy was a mouthful). They didn't develop much of a relationship past Max, who recognized her from her true world counterpart Marissa. He even smiles and blesses to use the crystal heart. The Ice Guardian Princess is the daughter of ice guardians. While listening to him and his desire to stay in the Ice Castle, she found suffocating occasionally. Still, she seems to be taking care of her and not talking to her when she was in The Ice Castle, the lavagirl had some disagreement with the ice princess. Apparently because of their opposing powers. There's a chance that part of her feelings were due to jealousy after Sharkboy called The Ice Princess beautiful. Max's love of Marissa turned into the Ice Princess after meeting her. The power of the ice princess came from where Marissa sits in her real world classroom. It is located under the air conditioning that connects Marissa and the cold in Max's dream world. Mr. Electricidad's protective nature has drawn similar habits to The Guardian's Ice. Mr. Electricidad (father) Marissa Electricidad is a character in The Adventures of SharkBoy and LavaGirl. She's Max's love interest and Mr. Electricid's daughter. Marissa's look is a young girl with curly blonde hair and browned skin. She has a pair of black oval-shaped glasses at the start of the film, her hair being pulled back into a braid. She wears a pink hooded top under a purple long-sleeved shirt, which is finally covered by a white hooded sweatshirt. He wears jeans with a pink belt and white trainers. At the end of the movie, he only wears a pink t-shirt. Her hair is on the floor, too, and she appears to have a friendship bracelet knit on her wrist. Marissa's personality seems to be a small and mediocre girl. She's too nervous to tell her dad she's too cold in the current classroom seat. She's quirky enough to make her own characters after first listening to SharkBoy and LavaGirl. When Max told her she could defeat Mr. Electric with a crystal heart, she hesitated for a moment before confronting him in battle. She didn't even take a bath when she used her newly-eded icy powers against him. History doesn't talk much about her past. Her father, Mr. Electricidad, is a teacher at her school and is very protective of his daughter. Turns out she was in love with Max and believed his sharkboy and LavaGirl stories from the beginning. She even created her own superheroes, The Ice Girl, who gets her powers from the Crystal Heart and The Dream Boy. One day in class, she's got allergies, so her dad tells her to stay inside during recess. It's also very cold from the air valve above it, so Max offers to replace the seats with her, but Marissa refuses because her father won't like it. Of course, Mr. Electricidad is a deterrent to Max from making friends with Marissa. When Mr. Electric attacked the school, Max gave her a real crystal heart that came from the planet Drool so she could save everything. He's using the power of the crystal to beat Mr. Electric and make it snow. Marissa's powers and abilities only have all the skills through a magic necklace called The Crystal Heart, which Max brought to her from Drool. Without her, she's helpless. The crystal heart gives her different icy abilities and supposed ability to freeze time. Mr. Electricidad's relationship, Mr. Electricidad, is Marissa's protective father. While he cares about her, she seems to be too sound and protective. He even at Max for talking to her (assuming he's flirting) when he's in his class. He doesn't seem to have any cruel feelings for him. Max Marissa is in love with Max. She believed in his stories from the beginning and encouraged them under her father's critique. She believed in him when she hinted she could beat Mr. Electric. Mr. Electric Marissa beat Mr. Electric by freezing and then destroyed it with the Crystal Heart. She didn't get rid of it when she saw Mr. Electric being her father's representative. Marissa Gallery in Max's old headquarters. Max put a crystal heart on Marissa.Marissa before using Crystal Heart.Marissa to freeze Mr. Electric.Marissa froze Mr. Electric.Marissa playing in the snow, which she made with other students. Edit In exchange for a little patience with 3-D glasses and some lingering retinal seed, Robert Rodriguez's The Adventures of Sharkboy and Lavagirl and 3-D offers a retooled Wizard of Oz story detailed re-imagined as a green screen dream. The adventures of Sharkboy and Lavagirl in 3-D were based on characters created by Rodriguez's 7-year-old son Racer, which might explain why symbolism makes meander a little. (Do 7-year-olds read grades? Because that seemed odd.) Sharkboy's message -- believe in your dreams, stick to your dreams, learn to dream with your eyes open, don't stop believing, etc. -- he seems like a pure father, though. That's the message from George Lucas, the word comfort of geeky guys who prefer the security of simulated worlds and have the means to create. Max (Cayden Boyd) is a sad and dreamy boy who, with problems at home and at school, retreats into a dream world that enters his sleep. Given that his parents, played by Kristin Davis and David Arquette, are relentlessly bioheading, and that that lying sports bully, Linus (Jacob Davich) relentlessly, is no stranger to Max being the champion of the napper. In his sleep escapes to Planet Drool, lavene and lavene 3-D One of the milky and biscuit landscapes, talking bubbles, roller skate rides and more terrifying file on the subconscious than you'd heard in Friar's Club roast Sigmund Freud: There's a train from A stream of consciousness and a literal brain storm. Max's friends Sharkboy (Taylor Lautner) and Lavagirl (Taylor Dooley), a confident couple in front of superheroes, roam together on baked goods. A shark, a little strong boy with fine, gills and teeth for cutting viers, was raised by sharks after losing his father in a maritime disaster. Lavagirl, a beauty who is a violet made of molten rock, has long known her true identity. After Max was told twice in one day by his mother and his disgusting but exhorter teacher, Mr. Electricidad (George Lopez) to start living in the real world, sharkboy and Lavagirl collide through the windows of their classroom in a tornado to take him to save their planet. Drool was taken over by the evil Minus (Linus in the Count chocula get-up) and Mr. Electric (Lopez's face in what looks like an antique diver's helmet, with electric currents for limbs). On Drool, the trio must find the icy princess (Sašo Pieterser), the owner of an ice crystal capable of freezing time, and Max must learn to dream with his eyes open in order to return with his imagination from the clutches of hardened pragmatists. The Adventures of Sharkboy and Lavagirl and 3-D is bizarre and (if you can download the glasses) visually interesting enough, the script is refreshingly free enough (Wizard of Oz cribbing aside) references of pop culture and stock characters to make it feel completely authentic. Lautner and Dooley are as convincing as sullen, instinctive Sharkboy and shiny, hot-headed Lavagirl, and it's easy to see why they dominate max's shameful, hesitant dreams. But their hermetic planet has nothing to do with Max's lush and humid Texas, which, though briefly shut down, is so vividly scary and angrily known as an exciting, evil dream. *The Adventures of Sharkboy and Lavagirl in 3-D'MPAA rating: PGTimes guidelines: Some parts could be scary for very young children A Dimension Films/Columbia Pictures production.
