Polaris on the North Star is an important sailing star because the position of the sky is almost exactly (within a few degrees) of the Earth's axis of rotation. This means that if you are heading to the North Pole, you are facing north wherever you are on earth (as long as you are in the Northern Hemisphere). Finding Polaris is a very useful night navigation technique that has helped everyone from Egyptians to Vikings find it there in the wild ocean. But it is also one of the easiest stars to find - something my father taught me as a child - and can serve as a great entrance into the world of star stares and constellations. In fact, finding it probably includes two of the three most famous constellations in the Northern Hemisphere (two of which mention are found on the Internet and are the property of their respective owners. I cite a lot of information about the original source as far as I can find. [I wanted to take my own photos, but unfortunately the rainy season in Japan can be said to be cloudy. Some shopping malls have independent shops and restaurants, but are located near the main mall building. Large department stores are often referred to as anchor stores because they draw a lot of people to the mall. They are often on the edge of malls and have much larger square feet than other mall stores. Examples of department stores often found in malls include Macy's, Nordstrom, JCPenney, Dillard's and Sax Fifth Avenue as of 2015. Clothing stores occupy many spots in local malls. Popular mall clothing stores include Ann Taylor, Banana Republic, New York & Some Stores include GapKids, Jim Bollie and Justice. Accessories stores selling jewelry and shoes are also popular. The mall is a popular place for technical items. Many mobile phone companies have stores and kiosks in malls. Other examples of mall technology stores include beauty products, gourmet foods, health products, toys, pet supplies, etc. Examples include Teavana, GNC, and Build-a-Bear Workshop. Specialty store categories may also include local shops and businesses that are only available in that particular area. Islamabad bazaars display locally produced handmade crafts (copper and brass), terracotta tiles, handwoven rugs and carpets, embroidery, wool and silk shawl, stonework, unique woodwork, furniture and more. Concerns over consumer spending have unfairly hurt mall owners like Simon Property Group (SPG) - getting the report is that their earnings are driven by consumer sentiment and consumer sales, deutsche Bank analyst Loo Taylor says. But he says only 2 percent of a company's revenue actually comes from rent, a percentage directly tied to retailer sales. Most of Mall REIT's profits come from long-term leases averaging about 10 years. The industry is now benefiting from strong leases and high occupancy rates as retailers open more stores and take up space in quality malls. It's going to take a prolonged drought in consumer spending to really hurt malls, says Mike Kirby, research director at Green Street Advisors. Nevertheless, investors seem to be worried about mall REITs. Currently, shares in regional mall operators are up 15%, while the NAREIT Equity Index (excluding mortgage REITs) is up 27%. Class A mall operators located in areas where wealthy customers live may be the most undervalued. Class A mall operators are up 15%, while the NAREIT Equity Index (excluding mortgage REITs) is up 27%. while Class B malls tend to be older, with sales of about $350 per square foot. Green Street advisers say Class A mall operators such as General Growth Properties (GGP) and Taubman Centre (TCO) are both trading at a 13% discount to their net asset value (which is roughly equal to what property acquires on the private market). It's the overall fear of consumers and reflected in mall prices, says Chung Hyun, principal at Adele Capital Management, which invests in the sector. Nevertheless, Hyun says mall owners have good growth prospects and their current share price is cheap. He says investors can reasonably expect a 3% same-store net operating profit growth in the sector's quality name. My emotions are bad. The reality is good, says Dean Frankel, portfolio manager at Urdan Securities Management, which owns Mall REIS. The sector continues to raise good earnings numbers, with new rents priced at healthy premiums on old leases, Frankel says. If the economy weakens, Frankel expects landlords to see a deterioration in occupancy, but the decline will not be large enough to have a meaningful impact on fundamentals. Retail sales won't immediately affect impact could force mall-based retailers like Gap (GPS) - you can get reports and open fewer stores. With about 10% to 15% of the mall's landlord space open each year, REITs may face occupancy problems in the recession, which affects new rent pricing. The fourth quarter holds clues to retailers denerally reported strong sales in September as falling gas prices and falling weather helped boost consumer school spending. While fundamentals are expected to fall behind other commercial property sectors in earnings growth next year. Frankel says the mall division will see core funds grow by 8% from next year's business (he removes the benefits of one-off fees and lease terminations). This comparies with 20% FFO growth from hotel stocks and 9% growth in apartments. Investment funds are a common REIT performance indicator that excludes the impact of depreciation on net income. Most mall companies have a healthy development pipeline that add value but can hurt short-term earnings. Frankel suggests that investors will focus on top-notch names in sectors such as Simon, General Growth, Taubman and Macerich (MAC) - The Get Report all operates Class A malls. Frankel recommends avoiding owners of older Class B malls such as CBL (CBL) - get reports, Grimcher (GRT) and Pennsylvania REIT (PEI) - get reports. Class B malls are most affected by the slowdown because they are in the secondary market. Slowing down.
