Choppa style dance video

Rams defensive back John Johnson helped the Los Angeles Rams book their ticket to Super Bowl LIII with more time to go. With the game tied 23-23 in extra time, Drew Brees and the Saints faced 2-and-16 from their own 34 with a trip to Atlanta online. Baka watched wide receiver Michael Thomas deep down the field when Johnson fell back to steal a deposed pass, setting the Rams on their own 46-yard line. Johnson's touchdown helped the Rams score Greg Zuerlein's field goal with 57 yards. Johnson followed the main game with his own choppa-style offerings, reviving the imaginary handlebars to mimic New Orleans' long-season dance. The Rams' 26-23 victory sent the team to its first Super Bowl appearance since Super Bowl XXXVI, when they lost to the Patriots, 20-17. The New Orleans Saints are hot, and they feel it. During a timeout in the third quarter against Helang Philadelphia, cameras in the Mercedes-Benz Superdome caught receiver Michael Thomas and running backs Mark Ingram and Alvin Kamara dancing to New Orleans rappers Choppa and Master P' Choppa Style as the Saints led 38-7 ahead of defending Super Bowl champions the Philadelphia Eagles (4-5) on Sunday 18). Watch Kamara break it in this video by the Saints. The Saints (8-1) try to close out the game for their ninth consecutive victory and continue their lead in the NFC South after the Falcons, Bucs and Panthers all lost their respective games early in the afternoon. The Falcons lost to the Cowboys on a field goal because of exposure's end time: It's an allied link, which means, with no additional cost to you, NOLA.com can get a commission on purchases made via click on the link. By John Sigler | 25, 2018 11:20 a.m. The New Orleans Saints have enjoyed a great season, going viral with a signature dance reception in the locker room after each victory. Most parties have been set to the early-2000s New Orleans favorite Choppa Style with quarterback Teddy Bridgewater introducing his unique motosikal dance moves. Well, the festivities have been brought to the holiday season and the contents of Drew Brees' one-house. The Saints quarterback shared a video on his official Instagram account on Christmas Eve of his three children Baylen, Bowen, and Callen walking around their living room mimicking the Bridgewater dance, with Choppa-style playing in the background - and of course, wearing matching Santa hats and pajamas: Isn't it great to see saints' Drew Brees, New Orleans Saints, Teddy Bridgewater, 2018 Season NEW ORLEANS (WVUE) - Choppa Style melangkaui generations. When I was a young man, I still remember the battle Records of Cash and No Limit Records. Choppa hits unlimited gold when she releases Choppa Choppa Now, lyrics aren't holiday-friendly like other songs like Nat King Cole's 1961 classic Christmas Songs. But Who can dat who can dance regular Christmas music? With that said, New Orleans Saints Quarterback Drew Brees presents this new holiday tradition. Kids will Style Choppa on Christmas Eve: Eve:
