With Melody Dawn Online Mahjong games are puzzle games based on Chinese board game, but online mahjong play is slightly different from the table version. The basic game has 144 tiles that are inserted into the pyramid model. Your goal is to match two like tiles and clear them from the game table. Tiles can be buried under or surrounded by other tiles. You win the game after you cleared all the tiles from the board. Master Qwan's Mahjong is an example of the simplest online mahjong game. You clear the mahjong board by pairing the tiles. When you make a pair, you get 50 points and a time bonus that gives you more time to find more games. The maximum time bonus you will receive is 60 seconds. If you clear the entire board, you will get a total of 5,000 points. Mahjong Dark Dimensions is another online variation of Mahjong. In this game, you are given a 3-D number instead of a two-dimensional number. You can spin the figure around to find two tiles that are the same. You are able to get bonus games. Take two games in seconds and you will get a point multiplier. You will get bonus points for matching like tiles in a row, and if you find time bonus tiles, you will get extra time attached to your toy clock. Looney Tunes Mahjong is focused on children. This game is almost identical to Master Qwan's Mahjong, but you match pictures of Looney Tunes characters instead of numbers, flowers or Chinese characters. Each cartoon character has a number, but the games are simple and easy to find. Mahjong 3D is a lot like Dark Dimensions game. You are given a 3-D figure and you can move your game board around to see all the pieces on the board. When you clear the board, you move on to the next level of play. Each level gets harder, and if you run out of time when you try to find games, you will lose the game. See Resources to find these and many other online mahjong games. There are many websites that allow you to pay for membership and play variations of mahjong, such as Pogo.com. You can find a lot of free sites just by searching. Source: Sony Most gamers enjoy playing single-player video games, but sometimes playing the same can get a little lonely. Fortunately, modern consoles are powerful machines that can connect you with other gamers around the world. All you have to do is hop online with your PlayStation 3 or PlayStation 4. Here's how. 1. Connect your PlayStation to the Internet All PlayStation 3 and 4 consoles come with built-in WiFi capabilities, so it's easy to log on to your WiFi network if you have one. Just go into your system settings and enter the network information. If you don't have a Wi-Fi network, you'll need to run the network cable from your modem or router on the back of the console. Sony 2. Subscribe to PlayStation Plus Unfortunately, playing online is not free. Sony's online subscription service is called PlayStation Plus. You can sign up from your console, or you can do it online right here. The price structure is as follows: $9.99 per month, $17.99 for three months, or $49.99 for the year. If you want to test the waters before committing, you can do a 14-day free trial. Your membership gets you more than just access to online games. You also get free games every month, special offers, online game game saves, and more. Click here for an in-depth look at the full list of benefits. Source: Sony 3. Play the game with the online component When the playstation is connected to the Internet and you have subscribed to PlayStation Plus, you are ready to go. Just boot up the game and hop online. Not all games have an online component, but many do. You can see if the game is online multiplayer, looking at the back of the event at the top where it says PlayStation Network. Games with online multiplayer will have Multiplayer listed as a PlayStation Network feature. That's all! If you are having trouble doing any of the above steps, just click here, then click on Get Help from the menu at the top of the screen. From there you can chat with support staff, email them, or view frequently asked questions. More from Tech Cheat Sheet: Risk is all traps phenomenal board game: It's cheap, engrossing, and has an uncanny ability to ruin a lifelong friendship in one night. The risks were originally released in the '50s, which makes it ancient compared to modern modern game design. The iconic name has undergone several official redesigns during this time, including one specifically designed for video games. Risks: Fractions. The first thing one might notice about this game is that, unlike many other entries on this list, it looks professional. Officially licensed by Hasbro and published by Electronic Arts, the factions have production values that make free browser incarnation venture look like student projects. Games of solid frame rate and cute art style - embodied in the game's five colorful fractions - make it one of the more attractive versions available, but game changes are where it really stands out. In addition to the classic risk regime, the factions provide an updated version of the game, in which, in addition to the typical routine of occupied countries and rolling dice, players can achieve goals such as capturing enemy capital or conquering the entire continent in a single turn. In doing so, the player will be given bonuses, which in turn gives the game a more strategic diversity. Other game additions include different types of terrain, such as volcanoes, which can greatly affect the flow of the game. The fractions are not re-wheeled, though, and many of the weakness of the game is still present. Grueling campaigns can grind to a halt because the hapless dice rolls out frustrating even the best strategist. But the changes still make for more dynamic campaigns, ushering risks into modern age game design. Steam Conquer Club was one of the first online strategy games to address global risk, and it is true of its founding principles. The free-to-play game features almost everything you know and love about the Parker Brothers original, just without an official title. The game doesn't require additional software – aside from your favorite browser – and touts a powerful, active community that often hosts online tournaments and hosts one of the most rip-roaring forums on the web. The interface might definitely use a bit of a facelift, but a wide selection of cards and the sheer number of diehard members have kept the game alive and well long after the site's launch. Conquer Club Like Conquer Club, dominated by Twelve features stunning cards and a game that helps make it shine among the rest of our c stab. The interface and gameplay are sleek, with over 30 cards to choose from, but games take some time to fill, given quite a small community of users. Once signed up, players can choose from a classic deathmatch scenario or capitals, a game in which your opponent only needs to capture your capital to capture all your territories and automatically win the game. The game is free to play, regularly updated, and provides a premium option if you decide you want unlimited active games, private messaging, vacation periods, or a slew of other features that are not included in the standard account. Dominating 12 Although it's not a risk per se, Land Grab is another browser-based strategy game that shares many similarities with risk-free association whatsoever, legally speaking. After you create a free account, players can participate in up to four games at once as they fight for the ultimate world domination of more than 60 user-created cards. The interface and maps are decent – not outstanding, but what can you expect when players create content? However, some cards are standouts and show quite a lot of promise. Land Grab ranks among the best venture-like games, given the full-fledged customization capabilities, a strong base community, and excellent replay value. LandGrab Cartographs rejoice! Major Command boasts some of the stunning Risk Esque game currently available online. The interface and map design is simply gorgeous, whether you are alone on one battlefield in Africa or operating globally, and the ability to choose between Casual and Real Time game modes adds a level of depth that is hard to find elsewhere. Like the risk, players are randomly assigned to the region and are assigned deployed troops in an attempt to conquer map or reach a mission mission The game is free to play, regularly updated, and features a lively community that never seems to get enough Major Command. Try to join the clan by entering the tournament or choosing a premium version if you really want to get down and dirty. With over 200 national cards, War Gear has one of the most extensive and adaptable options when it comes to gaming risk-like alternatives. The site allows players to schedule their games in their own time — whether you want to make turns within several days or just hours — and contains a wide range of user-generated content. Launched in 2009, the site remains strong, loyal after years, and is still constantly growing and evolving. Warlight is a risk alternative that is actually worth it, both on-and offline. The game features astounding AI, a decent collection of cards, competitive ladders, and a compelling game that works in the same way as the other picks on our list. Some cards are massive (3,000 territories) and players can choose the pace at which the game plays if they want a faster paced game than traditionally offered. The site is also frequently updated, with new features rolling out regularly, and boasts one of the more flexible gaming engines out there. While we welcome greater customization of engine offerings, different game mechanics and modes can be a bit more novice player, taking considerable time to get up to speed. The active community is also quite small and forum posts remain rare at times. Times.
