iPhone 6s text notification sound not working

Has your iPhone failed to tell you that you have a new message? Imagine waiting for an important message on your iPhone and you miss it for not telling you. You are not alone, as a number of users have asked the same question and are looking for ways on how to fix it. Like others, this problem usually occurs when your iPhone is locked. This should not happen, but for some users, it starts after the iOS update. When a new message is received, your iPhone makes a sound or displays a notification. There are many factors to consider why this happens on your iPhone. That's what we're going to discuss in today's article. Hopefully, after reading this, you will be able to fix no warnings or voice text notifications or messages on your iPhone issue. Let's dive!

1. Restart the Messaging App. There are times when your app can't perform properly because it's been running for a long time. This could be because your iPhone is overloaded with tasks. To fix this, you need to close all apps including the Messages app, and relaunch them. Here's how to do it: First, go to your iPhone's Home screen. Then, open your latest app by doing the following gesture: For iPhone X or later, swipe up from the bottom of the screen to the center. For iPhone 8 or earlier, double-tap the Home button. Now, swipe left or right to navigate open apps. Next, swipe up on the app preview to close the app. Do this to all applications in the list. Finally, launch the Messages app again. After refreshing the app, send a text message on your iPhone to test the notification. If possible, do this while your iPhone is locked to see if the problem persists.
2. Restart your iPhone. You may have refreshed your iPhone app but there are times when it's just overloaded. When that happens, quitting the app and loading it again may not work due to a lack of resources on your device. To fix this, you need to uninstall the iPhone for these tasks. To do this, just go to your iPhone Settings, then tap General and then the Turn off option. Slide slide toggle to the right to confirm the process. But sometimes, your device may become unresponsive due to overloaded tasks. When that happens, perform a forced restart process on your iPhone.
3. Check & Date Settings; Time. Most apps won't work correctly if you have the wrong date setting on your iPhone. Especially the Messages app that needs to sync with Apple servers. So to be sure, set the & Date settings; Time your device to automatic detection. To go to your iPhone Settings, then click General options. Then, tap the & Dates option; Time, and turn on the Set Automatically option. With this, your iPhone will get the current time where you are and set up automatically on your device. After this, the Messages app should work correctly.
4. Disconnect the paired device. If your iPhone is paired with your Apple Watch, it forwards the notifications you get to your watch. As far as we want that this will not affect our iPhone, we have to wait for Apple to fix this problem. But for the solution, you may need to disable Bluetooth on your iPhone if you want the notification to work. To do this, go to your iPhone Settings and click Bluetooth options. Then, switch to the Bluetooth option to turn off the feature. Alternatively, you can turn off Bluetooth service on iPhone through Control Center. Just launch and tap the Bluetooth icon to turn it off. Turning off Bluetooth disconnects the paired device from your iPhone. This way you'll receive notifications without any problems.
5. Turn off Silent Feature. One of the features of your iPhone that can block notifications is Do Not Disturb mode. When it's turned on, you'll see a crescent icon at the top of your iPhone indicating that you won't get notifications from the app when the device is locked. To turn this feature off, go to your iPhone Settings and tap the Do Not Disturb option. Toss the Do Not Disturb button to turn it off. Another way to stay still on your iPhone is to turn on the Mute Switch. Unlike other features, this mode is controlled via physical buttons. When it's turned on, you won't hear your ringtones or voice notifications. To turn this off, flip the Side switch on your iPhone so that the orange line won't be displayed.
6. Turn off Hide Notifications in Messages. You might forget that you've turned on Hide Alerts on certain contacts in your Messages app. When this happens, certain contact messages will be hidden and you won't be notified. To fix this, you can disable the feature so you can be notified again. Here's how to do this: Go ahead and launch the Your Messages app. Then, tap a conversation with a contact you've turned on the Hide Notifications feature. Now, tap the Profile Picture Icon at the top of the screen and then tap (i) or info options. In the Details section, scroll down and toss the Hide Notifications button to turn it off. Then click Finish to complete the process. Finally, repeat Steps 2 through 5 to all contacts for which you have turned off notifications. After you turn on alerts for selected contacts, you'll fix text or message alerts or sounds on your iPhone.
7. Disable the Unknown Sender Filter. There are also other options that will automatically block messages from unknown phone numbers. Although it is really designed to block spam messages, this feature can also serve to block people you know that you failed to register on your phone. So, if you expect a message from someone who in your contacts, simply turn off the 'Unknown Senders Filter' feature. To do this, just go to your iPhone Settings and tap the Messages option. Then, scroll down to the Message Filtering section and toss the Unknown Sender Filter button to turn off the feature. After doing this, you should be able to receive messages even from unregistered contacts.
8. Check notification settings. If your iPhone doesn't have the correct notification settings, you might not be notified if you have a new message. To fix this, you'll need to change your settings to make sure you're notified. Here's how to do it: First, go to iPhone Settings and tap the Notifications option. Then, tap the Messages app from the list to manage the app's notification features. Now, switch the Allow Notifications option to turn it on. Next, turn off the Show in Notification Center option. If you can see that the Messages app has Deliver Quietly status, select Banner Style, and set it to Persistent. Finally, turn on the Badges option and select Sounds as the notification tone. When selecting a sound for notifications, make sure you choose one of the default options on your phone. After this configuration, try restarting your iPhone. For that process, see Method 2 of this article.
9. Check Sound Settings. You may get display notifications but without voice notifications. This could mean that you have the wrong settings for your voice notifications. To fix this, you should check the sound alerts on your iPhone and restore them to the correct one. Here's how to do it: First, go to your iPhone Settings and tap the Sounds and Haptics options. Then, in the Ring and Alerts section, make sure that the volume level is not muted or set to a minimum. Now, in the Sound Patterns and Vibrations section, tap the Text Tone option. Finally, select the default tone that is Notes. This will ensure that the tone works. By improving your voice notification settings, you will now receive notifications for your texts or messages.
10. Check the Tone of The Contact's Text. If you have a specific contact in your iPhone's contact list where you can't hear the tone of the notification, then there are also settings to adjust it. In fact, you can set the tone of text or ringtones of each of your contacts on your phone which is a very useful feature for accessibility purposes as well as customize how you get alerts. Here's how to check the tone of your contact's notification: Go ahead and launch the Contacts app on your iPhone. Then, tap the person's name in your contact list and tap Edit in the upper-right corner. Now, tap Text Tone and choose a default sound to make sure it works. Click Finish to finish and apply. Finally, repeat Steps 2 through 4 to other contacts that have problems with voice notifications.
11. Update iOS iOS The latest version. Now if you are still experiencing the same problem, it is possible that your current version of iOS has a bug. It is possible by the time you read this post that Apple may have released a newer patch update to address the issue. Therefore, we recommend that you try to check for any updates. To update iOS to the latest version, go to your iPhone Settings and tap General options. Then tap the Software Update option to see if there are any updates available. If you're having some problems while doing this process, learn more about how to proceed.
12. Reset All Settings. It is possible that undetectable corrupt settings on your iPhone are causing this problem. But before you proceed to perform this method, understand that doing this method will remove all the settings that you have configured so far back to factory default mode. Unlike the option to Delete All Content and Settings, the Reset All Settings setting does NOT delete your data such as contacts, apps, or other saved content. To continue, go to your iPhone Settings, then tap General, then tap Reset. Next, tap the Reset All Settings option and provide a passcode if applicable. After you reset your iPhone, go back to Steps 3 through 10 of this article and make the settings again. This time, it should be able to fix no warning of text or message or voice notifications on the iPhone issue. 13. Ask Apple for help. If after everything you've done doesn't solve the problem, it's time to ask for help from professionals. Apple certified technicians will be able to check if this is indeed a software or hardware issue. So to be sure, visit the nearest Apple Store and take advantage of their repair services. Now, you may need to check the warranty coverage for your iPhone before going there. Otherwise, there may be a service charge for repairs or replacements. If you want to avoid this issue and want premium support for your iPhone, be sure to check out Apple Care. Not sure if you have this service in your country? Contact Apple Support for services available in your area. And this wraps up our guide for today. Hopefully, this article can show you how to fix no alerts or voice text notifications or messages on your iPhone.
