TV UNIVERSITY September 24, 2020 Version 3.9.021 Bug Fixes and Enhancements It has really been an amazing experience to use this program this year. Words can't express how many joys this app has brought during the NFL regular season. The features are really amazing right from how easy it is to change games to keep track of scores. The landscape view is phenomenal and the ability to stream more than one game is epic! DirecTV has done an exceptional job all the way. Keeping track of my favorite team was nice, but the Fantasy setup can be improved. The most annoying part is local blackouts and land restrictions. Otherwise, this program is clearly a winner in every way. I recommend this program and are worth the subscription fees at any time. I bought it 10 weeks ago and have not yet been able to sign in because someone in St. Louis (DIRECTV said, as I have called for hours each week) has been logged into my account. This is a scam. I have changed the password no less than 10 times, I have changed the email address on the account with a new one I just created for this service and a password no one knows. All this and I still can't sign in because DirecTV allows this St. Louis person to use old credentials to access my account. It's beyond piss-bad security. They can't even kick any of my account. I've been spending hours on the phone with DIRECTV for weeks, trying to get them to help me, and they won't. The last person I spoke to, Theresa, accused me of giving my password to this St. Louis person, and I should ask them to sign out. Why would I have tried for 9 weeks to kick them off if it's as simple as that. I don't know who this person is. But they do. They can see the IP address. So why can't they kick it off? Or why don't you change your password 10 times and create a brand new email address that kicks them off? I'm tired of DIRECTV stealing my money and letting someone else use my NFL Sunday Ticket account. They won't refund my money or close my account. I'm going to report the purchase as a scam to my credit card company. We have a wireless connection to our living room smart TV. The app on our brand new TV crashes all the time. The local games that are on cable are dark out, so if we want to switch back and forth we have to switch between cable and app. 75% of the time when we switch back to the app, it does not load correctly. We've had to delete the app, reload it, log back in, and even then only sometimes it will work. Downloading the app each is very annoying. The darkened games are also very inconvenient. Inconvenient. they're going to block our games so the app is going to work so when you have to switch back and forth it's not just crap out with a black screen. This is the second year we've had the app, and there have been some improvements from last year (last year the whole app crashed several times without even loading in the first place, across multiple customers, it was all over Twitter), but there's still a lot of improvement needed to guarantee keeping your membership. Almost better to just watch the Red Zone through cable. The developer, DIRECTV, Inc., has not provided details of its privacy practices and handling of data to Apple. Help Center AT&T; T said it won't change the restrictions on the NFL Sunday Ticket package for the upcoming season. To purchase a Sunday ticket, you must still be either a DirecTV subscriber, or – if you do not subscribe to the satellite TV service – you may be eligible to get the streaming version of the service if you live in selected areas in different major cities, if you do not get satellite TV, or if you are a student. A report Friday on the blog site TVAnswerMan.com noted that the streaming version of Sunday Ticket is available in 29 U.S. markets to non-DirecTV subscribers. According to AT&T; T, this is not new (and the package is only available in certain areas of these markets). The eligibility requirements [for the NFL Sunday Ticket] have been the same for the last five years, the AT&T AVP for corporate communications Jim Greer. An NFL representative confirmed that the terms of the Sunday Ticket distribution have not changed since 2016, with the exception of the 2018 Test AT & T did in offering the package to DirecTV Now subscribers in seven markets. AT&T; T insists nothing has changed in where and how it offers nflsundayticket.tv streaming service to non-DirecTV subscribers. But if that's true, then over the past few years the company has been quietly offering the online-only version of the Sunday Ticket more widely than previously thought. It seems clear that AT&T; T want to promote the fact that you can subscribe to the yrte Sunday ticket package without also having to pay for DirecTV - because the company prefers consumers buy the pay-TV package as well. Last year, NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell said the league wanted to expand the distribution of Sunday Ticket to online platforms in addition to DirecTV, which would have ended the satcaster's exclusive rights on the out-of-market game package. But that hasn't happened. According to AT&T; T website, nflsundayticket.tv is only available to non-DirecTV customers living in selected multi-residential unit buildings (apartments, condos, etc.) nationwide in the United States where the DirecTV service is not available, living in selected areas within various major cities, living in a residence that has been confirmed as unable to receive DirecTV satellite TV service due to obstacles blocking access to satellite signals, or are students. DirecTV has been offering nflsundayticket.tv with the same restrictions since 2016. Back in 2014, it made the streaming service available to non-DirecTV users in three subway areas - New York, San Francisco and Philadelphia - in addition to consumers who could not receive satellite TV, and has since expanded it to parts of more than two dozen markets. DirecTV first started selling Sunday Ticket consumers who did not subscribe to DirecTV in 2010. Sunday Ticket was launched in 1994 on DirecTV, and in the United States it's the only place to (legally) watch all nfl games during the day sunday. DirecTV offers a special promo to new subscribers, giving them NFL Sunday Ticket Max - which includes the Red Zone Channel which shows each scoring station as well as the DirecTV Fantasy Zone Channel - for no extra cost, if they sign a two-year contract and buy a Choice package or higher. Otherwise, the base 2020 NFL Sunday Ticket costs $293.94 and the Sunday Ticket Max tier is $395.94 (to both DirecTV and non-DirecTV customers). The 2020 NFL regular season is set to kick off September 10 with the Thursday Night Football matchup between the Texans and Chiefs, which will air on NBC. Nbc.
