Samsung will launch the Google Assistant for its 2020 smart TV line up in India, France, the UK and other countries. Using Google Assistant voice commands, users will be able to search channels, adjust volume, control playback, open apps, and more. Assistants will be available on all Samsung 2020 smart TV models - QLED 4K and 8K TVs, Crystal UHD TVs, The Frame, The Serif, The Sero and The Terrace. In addition to the Google Assistant, Samsung smart TV users also have access to alexa and Bixby voice assistants. The South Korean tech giant announced the integration of Google Assistant into Samsung's smart TVs on Friday. No additional downloads, hardware, or installations will be required. Samsung further said that the assistants used can be exchanged based on household preferences, and will be compatible with the audience's existing voice assistant ecosystem. Using Google Assistant voice commands, viewers will be able to access their Google services such as Google Search, Photos, Maps, Calendar, and simplify them. You can also control lights, set thermostats, set alarms, and more, using voice assistants and compatible smart home devices. Viewers will be able to use the Google Assistant, Alexa, or Bixby to find and view content in person. Voice assistants can provide weather forecasts, find out the latest game scores, or play music. With Google Assistant and Amazon Alexa now supported [in addition to Samsung's Bixby], we invite our consumers to ask more about their Smart TVs, said Seline Han, vice president of visual display business at Samsung Electronics, in a statement. The Google Assistant is currently rolling out to France, Germany, Italy and the UK. It will be rolled out to India, Brazil, Spain and South Korea by the end of November, and several more countries by the end of this year. While Samsung's 2019 smart TV-s also have Google Assistant integration, the catch is that users are required to give commands through supporting smart devices, such as Google Home. Alexa integrated with Samsung smart TVs earlier this year. Which is the best TV under Rs. 25,000? We discuss this on Orbital, our weekly technology podcast, which you can subscribe to via Apple Podcasts, Google Podcasts, or RSS, download episodes, or simply press the play button below. Samsung Electronics announced today that Google Assistant will join the range of voice assistants currently available on Samsung Smart TVs 2020, giving viewers enhanced control and discovery capabilities. Available with Amazon Alexa and Bixby, the Google Assistant is now fully integrated into Samsung smart TVs and requires no additional downloads, hardware or installations, and is interchangeable, based on Household. The leading range of voice assistants is now available on all QLED 4K and 8K 2020 TVs, CRYSTAL UHD TVs, The Frame, The Serif, The Sero and The and is compatible with the audience's existing voice assistant ecosystem. Create Easy Controls and Discoveries Thanks to a wider selection of voice assistants, Samsung Smart TV users now have faster access to their favorite entertainment, real-time on-screen answers, and the ability to seamlessly control their smart home devices with their preferred voice assistant. By enabling voice commands, users can easily browse channels, adjust volume, control playback, open apps, and more. The use of voice assistants in our Smart TVs has grown exponentially since the launch of Bixby in 2018, said Seline Han, vice president of visual Display Business at Samsung Electronics. With google assistant and Amazon Alexa now supported, we invite our consumers to ask for more of their Smart TVs. Entertainment lovers can now use their preferred voice assistant to discover new content instantly with easy search by genre, director or actor. In addition to discovering new TV programs and movies to watch, viewers can ask Alexa, Bixby or the Google Assistant to provide a weather forecast, find out the latest game scores or play their favorite songs. With the Google Assistant, viewers will also have access to Google services they know and love to help streamline their days, including Google Search, Photos, Maps, Calendar, and more. By bringing the Google Assistant to a Samsung Smart TV, we want to connect your living room with the entire smart home and help you better manage your day, across your favorite Google services, said Jack Krawczyk Director, Product Management for Google Assistant. With our collaboration with Samsung, we can offer help from the Google assistant to more people around the world right from the big screen. Users can add another hub to any room in the home with a Samsung Smart TV that can now be used to control lights, set thermostats, set alarms, or perform other tasks under existing household voice assistant commands. Amazon Alexa on Samsung Smart TVs is designed to delight customers with an enhanced entertainment experience. In addition to navigating video and music content with ease, customers can also connect their alexa-built TVs with more than 100,000 smart home devices, to make everyday tasks more convenient, said Aaron Rubenson, Vice President of Alexa Voice Service and Alexa Skills. Our collaboration with Samsung continues to bring customers comfort in voice control on Smart TVs while giving customers access to the voice services of their choice. Samsung Smart TV Speak Your Language Since the integration of Amazon Alexa across Samsung Smart TVs earlier this year, support assistant already available to Samsung Smart TV users in 14 countries globally. Google Assistant is now available in the UK, France, Germany, Italy and will launch to 12 12 at the end of this year.1 For more information, please visit www.samsung.com. 1 Available in the UK, France, Germany, Italy at the end of October and in Spain, Brazil, India and South Korea at the end of November. The Google Assistant is my favorite voice assistant but when using a Tizen-powered Samsung TV, Bixby is the only option I get. Bixby isn't as user-friendly as the Google, Alexa, or Siri Assistants. While many people use Bixby, there are many who want to disable it. Here are hundreds of Bixby commands for Samsung Smart TV owners. These commands will help you control your TV, perform various tasks, and get things done for you quickly using the microphone in your remote control. Get ready to explore the full potential of your Samsung TV using voice commands. Using voice commands is a smarter way to navigate the settings menu, control volume and brightness, change channels, open apps, and so on. Bixby may be the default AI assistant available on Samsung Smart TVs but that doesn't mean that you can't use the Google assistant or Alexa commands to control your TV. By pairing your TV to Google Home or Alexa, you can also use Google Home voice commands and Alexa commands. However, if you don't like Bixby, here's a guide to disabling it on your Samsung TV. The smart remote that comes with the Samsung 2019 QLED TV series has a microphone button that can be used to provide voice commands.
