Stay up with the latest daily buzz with the BuzzFeed Daily newsletter! Page 2 While streaming music is enough for most people, some appreciate the understated art form of the music video. As varied as they are many, music videos offer a different, more visual perspective on the music you love. Below are some popular sites and resources where you can watch music videos for free. YouTube is by far the largest and most popular resource for online music videos. There are a large number of official music videos that you can watch for free, as well as a plethora of user-reviewed videos covering every conceivable topic. Just enter the name of your favorite band or artist to see a list of all the videos that fall under that name. Chances are, you will find the band or artist's official channel, which is where they have their official music videos. But since other users upload content as well, it's usually quite easy to find homemade music and lyrical videos for the songs you're searching for. Vimeo is a free video site with a variety of social networking tools. You can search for specific artists and sort the results according to your interests. If you ever get tired of manually searching for music videos, Vimeo also has an interesting editorial component. The Staff Selection section is a good place to browse for videos that have recently been put in the spotlight. As with most streaming video sites these days, Vimeo also has social networking features that you can use to share your favorite videos on Facebook, Twitter, Flickr, and other popular social sites. MTV provides three sections for music videos. One contains all the videos, another is just for the latest videos, and the latest shows you the most viewed music videos on the MTV website. To watch free videos, use the arrow keys to browse the categories or find videos with the search box, and then select one to open the player for a full-screen experience. When you watch some of the MTV music videos, there's a button that lets you share it over social media and another showing suggested videos. Billboard is a great place to find the top 100 songs this week. The Hot 100 page is updated every week to give you new content. You can use the play button to hear a preview of the song or click the video button to watch the full music video. You can even look at the top 100 songs from the last few weeks using the archive search. Thank you for telling us! Tell us why! Streaming music, or more accurate audio streaming, is a way to deliver audio — including music — without having to download files from the Internet. Music services such as Spotify, Pandora and Apple Music use this method to offer songs that can be enjoyed on any device. If you previously wanted to listen to music or another type of sound, you down an audio file in a format like MP3, WMA, WMA, OGG, or FLAC. However, when using a streaming delivery method, there is no need to download a file. You can start listening through a device or smart speakers almost instantly. Streaming is different from downloads in that no copy of the music is stored on your hard drive. If you want to hear it again, you can easily stream it again, even if some paid streaming music services give you the ability to do both — stream and download. The way the streaming process works is that the audio file is delivered in small packages, so the data is cached on your computer and played pretty much right away. As long as there is a steady stream of packages delivered to your computer, you will hear the sound without interruption. Alex.LMX/iStock/Getty Images Plus On a computer, in addition to obvious needs such as a sound card, speakers and an Internet connection, you may also need the right software. Although browsers play some streaming music formats, software media players installed on your computer may come in handy. Popular software media players include VLC, Winamp and RealPlayer. Because there are many streaming audio formats, you may need to install some of these players in order to be able to play all streaming music from different sources on the internet. Streaming music subscriptions have made huge gains in popularity. Apple Music, available on Windows PCs and Mac computers, is a streaming music subscription with more than 40 million songs you can stream to your computer. Amazon Music and YouTube Music offer similar subscriptions. All these paid programs offer free trials that allow you to evaluate their services. Some services such as Spotify, Deezer and Pandora offer free levels of advertising-supported music with the option of paid premium levels. On your smartphone or tablet, the apps provided by streaming music providers are the best and usually the only way to enjoy streaming music. However, all music services offer an app, so you just need to download it from the Apple App Store or Google Play to add music streaming on your smartphone or tablet. Thank you for telling us!
