To watch step by step practical, please check the video (it will be useful). I hope you enjoy this instructable, with the first and foremost i draw a pose of girls without any details, and in this way it's easier to erase potential mistakes. We are satisfied to start drawing the face. I've completed the face that I draw the size of the hair. Then add the curls and the remaining details. I also correct the girl's little face :) I ink with the pen finer every drawing. I've done, I'm erasing a pencil and tracking some lines with a thicker pen. I color her skin with: light pink and fuchsia. I mix dry on dry then I watercolor result. When the first layer dried, the shadows were added with purple and shirt color with the same color. I color the hair with orange, red and purple. In the first layer I use orange and I watercolor it. When the paint dries, I apply shadows with red and purple (then I watery again). Add reflections with a white gel pen and a tadan, the picture is finished! :D For the full operation please watch the video! ^ _- This will teach you how to draw curly hair to add to your drawing (girl)what you'll need.- Pencil (HB preferably) - piece of paper - rubber (favorite rubber) to draw the base, draw two ovals, as in the picture. Sorry the picture is really dark. Connect so that the 'cup'draw makes stripes on the cup. Like above_ add more stripes going in a different direction (sides are connected.) rubbing out the unthreatened parts as above. To make the hair look realistic, use stokes in the direction of the hair. Take your time! This may take some practice! Find out where the mine light source is directly in front of the hair. (As if you're a light source. If you do the same for me, rub it out in the middle of it, as shown above _nao, as the latter looks a little ugly, we go to stock gently above it as it is above our _), shade the hair so that the sides are darker than the middle. Struggling with boring arrangements that are difficult to make interesting. Pieces of fruit in a bowl, a bottle of wine - it can easily be the same old. Remember that fixed life can be from any object or group of objects, so you don't get caught up in the traditional subject matter. To create the best life graphics still, you also need to think about lighting and background as much as the theme. To do this, follow some simple tips and tricks. The goal of building a fixed life group is not to waste your time, but to give you a realistic basis based on drawing. If you don't have to imagine or guess what light might be falling on your scene or what the background might look like, it's easier to draw. Life graphics still allow you to get the right perspective, highlight shadows, highlight, texture, and experience with synthetic elements. All this happens before the pencil hits the paper! In the end, it saves you time and it's a wonderful practice you can use to develop your technical skills. Choose your location. A good direction light source is the key to a sturdy drawing or painting and a lamp or window shining perfect. Adjust the lighting. If the room is widely lit, use a panel or shade box to control the light that falls on your subject. You may need to be creative and use reflective materials such as kitchen foil wrapped on the panel to reflect light or blankets and cardboard boxes to prevent it. Think about your background. Architectural features such as window frame or door can add a trend to installation. A tone that contradicts the subject is handy. Fabrics can be a bit tacky, so use them carefully. They decided the surface could look fantastic wooden grain table, but only if you are sure to handle details such as taking shortcuts on textures can weaken the drawing. The novice may be better using a tablecloth. Choose a plain one if you don't want any extra details or a wide check or bar style to add a little color without going outside. Choose your objects. Beginners should avoid strange-shaped objects that may look wrong even when you get it right. Automated objects require careful presentation of shape and perspective. However, a casual or distorted look can work, when treated with confidence. Group order. When arranging, consider the synthetic elements and avoid cute central positioning and symmetry. Just avoid accumulating fruit in a bowl - let it spill from a bag, or be half eaten on a plate. Give flowers a date - tucked in a hat, scattered in a gutter, or by a headstone. View your arrangement through the viewfinder. It can be as simple as an empty frame cut from a white or black board. This will prevent all distraction and allow you to evaluate the configuration and consider putting it on the paper. If using natural light, take pictures to until the light begins to change. Also take photographs if you are using perishable materials (especially flowers) or where your work may be turbulent. Transparent and reflective objects, such as bottles and metal objects, can be difficult but excellent for detailed observation. Fruit is a great start as natural shapes are a little more forgiving and give you interesting textures to work with. Are you having trouble knowing what you're drawing? Finding a theme is not always easy, but the ideas are all around you. One of the best options is the drawing of simple objects, which are usually known as still life drawings. Interesting objects everywhere around you. From basic apples in your kitchen to a small scene you set up using common objects. Still drawing life is both fun and challenging. It's a great way to develop your technical skills and practice drawing techniques. It also allows you to explore your ideas through art. There are many ways to use an object or still life to tell a story or evoke a feeling through drawing. Whether you're drawing a simple, singular or complex object, this type of drawing allows you to take full control of the subject. Let's see if we can't stimulate some ideas for your next drawing one object is all about simplicity. The complete focus is on this object, the surface on which it sits, the fall of light and shadow, the decoration of its surface, and its composition. Consider a very simple exercise - draw an egg or piece of fruit, using a single light source to practice shading. Think about the shape, size, weight, texture, contrast, font, detail, and surface. When you create a drawing with a single object, the position on the page is important. Think about how far its edges from the page frame. Whether you're cropping closely or letting a lot of white space change the feel of the drawing. Usually the traditional set of fixed life - slung cloth, a bowl of fruit, a jug, a bottle of wine, or a vase of flowers - usually combines a variety of textures, patterns and shapes to allow the artist to show their technique and delight the viewer. The biggest challenge is getting a pleasing arrangement. It's really easy for traditional life still looks boring, so you need to really study the set before putting a pencil on paper. The most common mistake is flat lighting, although the consequences depend on how the image is handled. A shade box or dark background along with one light source does a lot to create interest. You can also increase color and look for an interesting view, as in this antique illustration of classic food. Contemporary is a wide-ranging term these days, but in this context, we are looking for new materials with crisp design and clean and rich lighting. Forget vintage, legacy or traditional. Going to look clean modern pieces (skip the postmodern cultural Urban grungy metal, or sterile plastic with fluorescent light. Arrange a few stainless steel pots on a black background, do a tonal study in graphite pencil, or search for plastic objects with interesting cuts and casting. Automated objects can be tricky - the flexible ruler makes soft curved lines easier to draw. Hard-edged look, clean, crisp, and just non-sheer. While this lifestyle can still be a great challenge, the results can be amazing. If you are looking for a project that blends traditional and modern, turn into still vintage life. This gives you the opportunity to work with old objects, employ modern configuration, and play with interesting drawing techniques to make the drawing look like an object. Create an arrangement of antique wooden baby toys (or similar) and old cuts. Rocking chairs, old kettles, a ball of yarn and knitting pins have a visual interest as well. A single object that has been cropped in a document or group on the window sill can look great. Add a pattern with checked fabrics or floral if you have the patience for it. Look for worn surfaces, rust and peeling paint. Try charcoal or pastel painting. Create a permanent coffee stain by 'sealing' with a coffee cup and dark brown ink, and some splashed on paper. Add some turns. Colored paper cream, dark brown ink or pencils, or a silent plate, can add all to the vintage feel. Instead, try the cream or white paper with bright faded just reminiscent of vintage magazines and posters. Many of the art forms have a strong narrative tradition. The artist arranges the subject so that the viewer has the feeling of walking on a story - a story in progress, has just happened or is about to happen. Bloody knife, broken object, historical elements, photographs and clothes on a chair - objects can be loaded with meaning. Traditional narrative painting is usually full of characters with gestures and dramatic excitement. In fixed life, objects need to communicate the story for you. Imagine that the protagonist in your 'story' has just left the room - perhaps in a great hurry! What's left behind? The most successful examples are when you manage to hint at the viewer without being too obvious or illustrative. It tells the story of the life of the object through a series of drawings. For example, a mug in a brown wrap tied with a string as if it were a gift. Steaming on a comfortable table drew along with a beloved cup; Sitting alone on a drain board, but sitting on a desk full of pencils, with a torn picture; What does that tell you? Is it a story of heartbreak or loss? It may tell the story of a pet doll, a set of flowers, a bottle of wine, or a dollar bill. Need a challenge? Find the most mundane object you can think of and create a story for it. Contemporary beings - As a mobile phone - it can be difficult, because we don't have an artistic tradition to refer to when representing them. Instead, think about using something that most viewers have a long history with and can provoke emotion. Passion.
