Us history trivia quiz test your knowledge answers

Image: referring to the hsw For Speed enthusiasts, fast cars are passionate, not just something to take you from point A to B (hedly, the great success of The Fast and the Furious franchise). While we certainly do not recommend engaging in such risky fictional behavior, it is fun enough to take in the race and impressive over the crazy things these cars can do. Once the car starts to hit the road accelerated things quickly (pun really intended). In 1908 when the first Model T hit the sales floor, cars could only get up to about 40 miles per hour. However, by 1946, British car Healey Elliot would be maximal at 104.65 mph easily leaving the currently likened Model T (and just about everything) in his dust. Of course, this car is aiming for a race and almost nothing has access to one, but it's still pretty incredible to see what automotive engineering can do in a short period of time. Fast forward to 2018, however, and hennessey Venom F5 will really leave Healey Elliot in his dust, with a top speed of 301 mph. Venom shouldn't be too dirty, though. If history had taught us anything that it wouldn't hold top spot for a long time! When it comes to this four-wheel speed monster, whiplash is part of the fun. Or maybe you have a friend who tells you about these amazing 288 GTO they look somewhere, and you don't know what they're talking about? It happens to the best of us. With dozens of makes and hundreds of models, how can anyone hope to keep everything straight without having a direct link to Wikipedia in their brain? It's not easy. But it's not impossible. Some make and models are iconic. You know that Ford makes Mustang, right? That Chevy has Corvette. Tesla has Model X. Some models are easier to recognize than others, but if you feel like you're a tried and true gearhead, you probably know more than just basic facts. Perhaps you also know the first model made by Peugeot or who made the Esperante. If you feel like you have a handle on your make and model, then it's time to showcase your stuff in this artificial quiz and model!
