The game was first released in Japan in April 1984 and released as a launch game for nes in North America in October 1985, and was also released in Europe two years later. In Duck Hunt, players use the NES Zapper with the CRT TELEVISION to shoot ducks that appear on the screen. Ducks appear one or two at a time, and the player is given three shots to pull them down. The player scores on each duck shot. If the player hits the required number of ducks in a single round, the player advances to the next round; otherwise, you will receive a game on the player. The game initially received a few reviews, but was given mild critical praise. Before the NES version, Nintendo also made a Duck Hunt game based on the Laser Clay Shooting System released in 1976. It was later a pack-in game paired with Super Mario Bros. package then included World Class Track Meet. The game was released in 2014 as a Virtual Console title for The Wii U. Duck Hunt is a shooter game where the goal is to attract moving targets on the mid-flight television screen. The game is played from a first-person perspective and requires a NES Zapper light ball, which the player aims and shoots at the screen. Zapper gun also requires a CRT television screen since it does not work with LCD or HDTV. Each round consists of a total of ten targets. Depending on the game mode, the player selects before the game starts, one or two targets appear on the screen at any time, and there are three shots or attempts to shoot them before the player disappears. The player is required to shoot the fewest number of targets to advance to the next successful round; failure causes the end of a game. The difficulty increases as the player advances to higher rounds; targets will move faster and minimum number will increase the targets to hit. The player gets points after hitting a target and also gets bonus points to hit all ten targets in a single round. Duck Hunt tracks the highest score of players for all games played in a single session; however, it disappears after you close the game. Duck Hunt has three different game modes to choose from. In 'Game A' and 'Game B', targets fly ducks through woodland and in 'Game C' the targets are clay pigeons fired from a distance from the player's point of view. In 'Game A', one duck appears on the screen at the same time, while in 'Game B' two ducks appear at a time. 'Game A' provides a second player to control the movement of flying ducks using a regular NES controller. The game starts in Round 1 and can continue until Round 99. If the player completes Round 99, he passes to Round 0 (in 'Game A'), a killing screen where the game moves erroneously, like targets that move casually or never appear, and eventually ends.
