The ultimate game machine competition began nine years ago, when the computer gaming world started the annual ritual of collecting and checking gaming PCs. I was in those first days, and the system was back mostly dos, often had SSCI drives and Blogangle fast 133 MHz pentam processors. Hack, 3D graphics for concerts were in their childhood, but one thing was in common with their system today's uber machines: they had I. After that, L stood to scan the line, and contained a couple of Duo 2 cards. Since the game system still needs fast-dos graphics, the basic card was often a matron millennium or some card based on the old Tsang ET4000. Oh, and prices around $3, 500. Fast forward to today. Computer gaming world is developed in games for Windows: Official Magazine. The tremetaky for Windows and the game worked together to bring this round-up of the high end game system to each other. We have a price of close to $8,000 at the top end. Even the lowest price system weighs $4,000. Of course, there is nine years of inflation since then, so their prices are not quite surprising as they are back in 1997. This week, we're running three days of the ultimate game system. Each day will be the highlight of two system reviews, and we'll announce the winner on Thursday. These are all serious claims, which survived a severe period of benchmarking and stabilization tests. Five of the six are overlock while three of them have quad-core processors. CPU is not a component at all. Four systems arrived on view with nvidia GeForce 8800 in L (scaleable link interface) mode. And nobody, though they use all the raids to speed up the performance of arrays, mostly reading. I mentioned earlier that we actually received nine systems. As Dain Ghadstony from Games for Windows likes to put him, three didn't even leave his depths. Ultimate game machine firing has always been an opportunity for PC companies to demonstrate their blood edge capabilities. But sometimes companies try either a little too hard, or others Intervention. Pc had serious problems with three stability. Three companies offering all these systems have good track records, so it's not like they were in flight-to-night operations. Finally, he pulled out of the competition completely. In one case, a company tried to apply an interesting new caller, but we used them that they can't tolerate the risk shipping. Another company has pushed their system very hard that they recommended direct wall plugging, as the electric strip can currently be just low enough to stabilize the system. In another case, it was just a case of, we think that's a little bit too passionate to win. Finally, he pulled out of the competition. One of the terms of entering was that companies needed to enable their system from their websites by November 15. We have to give credit to companies that have exited, because they wanted them to offer any system offered to their customers. So we're not name names, because it's not possible that you'll see these exact systems for sale. Six PCs brought to life, including many that pushed the blood edge very hard. These are the systems we celebrate . It's also worth discussing. We always had a 1-10 goal system in Tremetaqa. We want to clarify some scores for this roundup. On scale, a 5/10 average. This is unlike the grading system in schools, where 7/10 is a C and is generally thought of as average. It gives us a little room to play with the scale. So there is a 5/10 average, authorized system that may have some problems, but none of the problems are displayed. 5 below nothing, and the product is seriously poor. So if you see a score of 5/10, don't think it's inerror. Think, instead, it's appropriate lying on what it does, there may be some interesting features, but compared to its colleagues, is unusual in most ways. For the ultimate game machine, the main quality are stability, performance and gamer based features. Thankful, stability was a non-problem with surviving, so it really was revealed to stability, performance and the characteristics based on the gamemer. Secondary features were priced, overall design appeal, and fit and finish. These secondary features can make the difference between two systems which are otherwise very close. GeForce 8800 GTS ReviewnoreMail, I mention upcoming articles this week on Tremetka, but since the week is mostly THE U.G.M. contest, I want to review today to make sure that the GeForce 8800 GTS of evGA. Last week, we took a look at PNYC's GeForce 8800. The maximum cost of the board before 8800 is $599 or more (many looking around $649.) is being priced by 8800 GTS boards $449-$499-still very expensive, but it is at least 600 marks below The Bockazadus. We've received a lot of requests for 8800 GTS reviews, so we've got it today for your read pleasure. Check what to say about Jason's 8800. It's also the holiday season, and we've started running our vacation's geek gift guide. And don't forget to sub-saith our weekly own. Cast.
