Since December 2010 release. It's so hot inside the tent that Mickey Mouse has to take a break every 15 minutes to properly hydrate. The assistant leads His Mickines to a nearby but hidden place because, at Walt Disney World in Orlando, it's assumed that actually seeing the mouse head pop out and some dripping wet dick inside a Gatorade buzz suit can be so traumatic for kids that lawsuits can lead to. This has happened before. For the present reason, everyone is ready to return home, but the presentation of the trophy is an integral part of any national event of the United States Auto Club (USAC). It is, after all, the first ever Mopar .25 Nationals, a genuine big-deal motorsport event for a quarter of dwarf-racing kids, many of whom are still young enough to put out milk and biscuits for Santa. As the races took place at Walt Disney World - or, more specifically, in a vacant parking lot at Walt Disney World Resort - it was assumed that disney's cast of characters would present trophies. Mickey Mouse must have drawn a short straw because he's the only one who showed up. These are the heavy, boiling children- the best of 165 of those as distant as New Mexico who snuck into the awards ceremony tent, wheeling their quarter dwarfs around a 1 1/20-mile three-oval racetrack. Dating back to the 1930s, a quarter of dwarfs - which are certainly larger than a quarter the size of a conventional dwarf race car but compete at a speed that is about a quarter as fast on a track that is a quarter by then - have been a throw-back point for hundreds, perhaps thousands, of racing careers. Viewing photos of A.J. Foyt began in a quarter dwarf. So did Johnny Rutherford, Swede Savage, Bobby Labonte, Terry Labonte, Jimmy Wasser, Sarah Fisher and Ryan Newman. Joey Logano started the race a quarter dwarf at the age of six. Gordon was five years old and he won the championship at the age of eight. Are there young drivers in Mopar .25 Citizens who hope to follow in those who So. And there are definitely many like-minded parents driving their children to the starry sky here, especially judging by the 40-foot trailers towed by diesel trucks apparently required to carry a pair of quarterly dwarf cars that weigh between 160 and 320 pounds, in that the driver is included. Just a couple of years ago, a quarter-dwarf race was organized around local racing clubs, which tended to build a small track - dirt or asphalt, they run across both. Then the USAC, which sanctions full-size dwarf racing and sprint cars, and from 1956 to 1997 sanctioned the Indianapolis 500, sensed an opportunity. In March 2009, the USAC created a .25 series that organized local clubs under one set of rules, and began holding national events. The national champions are decided after 10 races conducted from California to Florida. There are no prize money. Riders can be aged four and a half, under 16, before they have to retire. Most riders, if they are serious before, go to big cars in other series long before they reach 16. View photos of ROY RITCHIE There are 15 different classes a quarter dwarfed by mini-Mickyard, but they pretty much look equally uninitiated. They differ mainly in the wheel base and engine used - usually Honda or Briggs & Stratton. The quarterly dwarf advocates that the machines are more like full-size cars than go-karts, in part because they have cages, seatbelts and four-wheel drive suspensions. Used cars start at about $1,800 full, and new cars dressed in carbon fiber can top $10,000. Budgets are something Todd Bubba's love sponge Clem knows all about. As a radio personality, Bubba's Love Sponge - which is what his driver's license and passport say - hosts a very raw syndicate show with Tampa on terrestrial radio, and in 2006 he became the first personality hired by the equally raw Howard Stern to help fill two channels of Stern's program on Sirius satellite radio. Besides owning a super-late model team that he races for himself on full-size dirt tracks across the Southeast, Bubba Love Sponge has a first-class quarter-dwarf program for his eight-year-old son Tyler, as well as for two friends, 11-year-old Michael Atwell and, next year, nine-year-old Trevor Taylor. All races under the banner of Clem Racing, Inc., and Tyler and Michael have already been signed as development drivers for NASCAR rider Tony Stewart and his Stewart-Haas motorsport team. See photos of Bubba Love Sponge has some sponsors, but most of the costs come out of his pocket. If I had to write a check for everything we spent on Tyler's career, it probably would have been somewhere between $500,000 and $750,000, he says. And you include the plane I bought to that we can get to and from the races----engine Cessna 414-and-we are over a million dollars. Tyler started driving when he was three years old. Bubba says: I bought a quarter of a Stanley dwarf, screwed it up with pedals and seats for him, and he just drove it for two years. We called it a quarter dwarf day care. Two years later, Tyler started racing, and this year he's chasing a USAC national title. He ran in nine of 10 national races this season, missing only California, and finished third with 66 riders in the Junior Honda class and won the Junior Animal title, the Briggs & Stratton engine used in this division). By the end of the year, will Tyler run in 55 local, regional and national events 2010.Is his career or hobby? I'd like to think it's a career, says Bubba, but I would never push it into it. I'm probably the stereotypical dad of a quarter dwarf-my father never allowed me to race as a kid, so I'll probably live my childhood vicariously through Tyler. Many parents will try to deny this, but I have to be a realist. I've won four features in my life and he's won 21 this year. He's a much better driver than I ever thought about that. View photos roy RITCHIE And, yes, Bubba realizes that as Tyler moves up in racing, he will switch to faster, heavier, more dangerous vehicles. Racing is a risk, but I don't think we can have that boy in a bubble mentality. Kids are affected in gymnastics, baseball, soccer-kids need to be kids,-but as parents, we need to make sure we give them the best safety equipment we can. ... Ever since he was three, Tyler has worn a tiny restraint of HANS's head and neck the size of a beer. They're like $600, but I wouldn't think he's racing without one, Bubba says. As for part of Tyler, he does his job: Winning races - first in the Junior Animal feature at Disney World, and, just as importantly, carefully listing his sponsors when someone asks him for comment. Finishing second at Junior Animal at Disney was Isaac Solochek, who had just turned seven. His parents, Jeffrey and Lear, are journalists at a newspaper in St. Petersburg, and unlike Bubba Love Sponge-who grew up in Indiana surrounded by racing-Solochek never gave him an opinion until three years ago. Blame Pixar, says Lyra Solochek, and the movie Cars. Isaac became interested in cars and then racing, and by the time he was four and a half years old, he was driving a quarter dwarf. Watching ROY RITCHIE Lear's photos is the de facto crew leader, the result of a vicious learning curve: We knew nothing about racing. Basically, I learned how to make mistakes. But luckily there are a lot of good people with whom we race with someone who gave us pointers, explained the basics and then we just dive and do it. As for Isaac's racing budget, it's somewhat south of Bubba's investment: Maybe $15,000 for and a small closed trailer, and this year, year, another $10,000 for tires, travel, entry fees. Indeed, says Lyra, I try not to think about it. We have to be prudent about how we spend. Do we want a fancy trailer, or do we want to spend money on a good car? Like Bubba, Lyra doesn't discount the possibility that Isaac could end up racing as a professional: But we have to be realists. It's so competitive. We can't go into this expecting him to be a NASCAR driver. But, while he's enjoying it, we'll take it as far as it goes. ... View photos of ROY RITCHIE After visiting the Disney catwalk, both Tyler Klem and Isaac Solochek had the answer for the media. I would like to thank 1-800-ASK-GARY, K&A; N filters, lumber liquidators, bell helmets . . . and all my other sponsors who are great,' said the spring,'s wrapper-sunglasses worn by Tyler. I'm just happy to be here,' Isaac said. My mom and dad worked really hard. Both boys seem completely at home here on the track and in the pits. I have a lot of friends that I see on the track, Isaac says. Even when I don't win, I have fun.
