The series revolves around a group of obsessed characters based in Pasadena, California. The Big Bang Theory (BBT) became a top-rated broadcast full of geometric jokes, comic book collections and twisted memorabilia. The show is currently in its 11th season and will be launched on Thursday's show Tangle Bitcoin. Buying a tiger during the episode, the BBT cast finds a laptop that belongs to her ex-boyfriend Penny Zack that contains bitcoins. In the show, Howard exclaims, I can't believe one Bitcoin is worth $5,000, to which Leonard replied: Didn't we get out a few years ago? After the discovery, the cast imagines spending Bitcoin on luxury items. For example, Raj details to Leonard that he would like to buy a tiger with his share of money. However, Sheldon decides to mess with the gang after they choose to remove it from the investment split. After this, Howard opens the wallet on the laptop and Leonard asks, how much is he in there? It's empty, Howard explains. At the same time, the mischievous Sheldon seems to have a tendency to the place where the money is stored. 12.6 million viewers will see a comic tv broadcast full of tales about Bitcoin, it's safe to say bitcoiners are excited to see their favorite cryptocurrency on a well-known TV BBT seasons have seen a rise in exponential ratings since last season by receiving a rating of 2.6 for adults aged 18-49. This means that at 8pm EDT next Thursday, more than 12.6 million viewers will hear about Bitcoin, mining and portfolios in a comedic way. Moreover, with bitcoin gaining popularity, the decentralized currency has appeared on many television shows over the years. This includes shows such as Good Wife, Mr. Robot, The Simpsons, and even At Risk. The next show of The Big Bang Theory was also filmed a while ago when bitcoin averaged $5K per BTC. Now Bitcoin has almost doubled that last month at $9,000 per BTC, and the market cap of $150B is huge. This week's BBT episode will certainly bring more attention to the internet of money along with a touch of laughter.
