Update developer website in app store It's a little weird, but I love it Why is this app that is meant for kids have ads that you can't remove? this is an app filled with too many distractions. I don't recommend it to any parent, your child will be very frustrated every time they touch something and it opens the web browser. iOS apps should never be so intrusive. My 2 almost 3 year old loves this. It's simple for her and I haven't yet encountered any problems with it. From about the age of three years, your child can enjoy dress-up games. Dress-up games let your child act out different roles, explore ideas about the real world and develop her imagination. For example, she may choose to be a pirate stomping around and scare people, or a doctor gives her teddy a check-up. Dress-up games and pretend to play also allow your child to explore and express emotions in a safe way. For example, your preschooler could pretend to be a bit like a teacher or brave as a police officer. What you need kids dress-up gameChorish a box of clothes and other things your child can use for dress-up games. Your collection can include: old clothes, especially fun and colorful clothing shoes and boots - especially shoes that let your child go differently, like platforms or heavy bootshats, belts, handbags and pieces of fabric and scarves - these make large capes, turbans, veils and shawl dress-up props - you can buy these from a bargain shop or make your own. How to play dress-up games with your childStep back and let your child take the lead. Avoid telling your child what to be or wear. Creating an outfit and a character is part of the fun for your child. For example, he can use his imagination to create a superhero outfit from a towel and swimmers. Get into the moment with your child by asking her if you can play too. Follow her lead. If she wants to be a doctor, you might be a patient. Expand the game by asking questions and inventing new scenarios. For example, 'You're bandaging my broken arm? Will it fix it? Ow! It still hurts. What else can you do? Give your child a mirror so he can see himself dressed as a different character. He can enjoy doing different poses or pulling faces. For example, he could be a scary monster or a stupid clown. Sometimes your child might want to dress up and play imaginary games by themselves, or with her toys. You can hear her talking to herself in different voices as she plays. It's OK if she doesn't want you to join in - you can just ask her another time. Customizing dress-ups for kids of different agesYour younger child can just enjoy putting on and taking out different things. For example, she may want to try on different hats or clothes without getting into a character or an imaginary game. You can still join in – for example' You look like a rodeo rider the hatred. Can I it on next? You can involve your older child in making his own costumes. Try a pirate patch made of a piece of black cardboard and some elastic, or a pair of wings made from an old pair of stockings stretched over some bent hangers. Do you like to dress up?
