PicturesRelease dated December 22, 2021 (2021-12-22) (United States) CountryUnited StatesLanguageEnglishThe Matrix 4 is an upcoming American science fiction action film and the fourth installment in the Matrix Franchise. The film was produced, co-written and directed by Lana Wachowski, who co-directed and co-wrote the previous three films with her sister Lilly. Keanu Reeves, Carrie-Anne Moss, Jada Pinkett Smith, Lambert Wilson and Daniel Bernhardt reprised their roles from previous films in the series. The film will be co-produced by Village Roadshow Pictures, Wachowskis Productions and Silver Pictures and is scheduled for release by Warner Bros. Theatrical pictures on December 22, 2021; it will also be streamed digitally on HBO Max in the US for a month starting on the same date. Cast Keanu Reeves as Neo[1] Carrie-Anne Moss as Trinity[1] Jada Pinkett Smith as Niobe Lambert Wilson as merovingian[2] Daniel Bernhardt as Agent Johnson[3] In addition, Yahya Abdul-Mateen II, Neil Patrick Harris, Jessica Henwick, Jonathan Groff, Toby Onumere, Max Riemelt, Eréndira Barra, Priyanka Chopra, Andrew Caldwell, Brian J. Smith, Ian Prie, Lavish and Ellen Hollman have been cast in undisclosed roles. Developing Production While filming the Matrix, the Wachowskis told their close collaborators that they, at the time, had no intention of making another film in the series after The Matrix Revolutions. [4] [5] [6] [7] In February 2015, in an interview promoting Jupiter Ascending, Lilly Wachowski called a return to The Matrix a very repulsing idea in recent times, noting the studio's propensity for green light sequels, reboots, and adaptations of original material,[8] while Lana Wachowski, discussing rumors of a potential reboot, said they had not heard anything but believed the studio might be seen[9] In March 2017 , The Hollywood Reporter writes that Warner Bros. is in the early stages of developing a franchise relau rollout, with Zak Penn in talks to write the treatment, and an interest in making Michael B. Jordan attached to the star. None of the Wachowskis were involved at that stage, though the studio had hoped for their blessing. [10] The idea of a reboot or remake was denounced by Penn, and ideas for the story set in an established universe explored, including, reportedly, a prequel film about young Morpheus or his descendants. [11] [10] [12] [13] [13] In March 2018, Penn said he was working on a franchise revival and was teasing the possibility of an expanded universe. [14] Penn clarified in October 2019 that he had worked on one of two Matrix projects at Warner Bros., and that his work was separate from the planned film. [15] Pre-productions of Keanu Reeves and Carrie-Anne Moss filmed motorcycle scenes in san Francisco's Financial District under the direction of Lana Wachowski. The film was officially announced by Warner Bros. on August 20, 2019. Lana Wachowski will return as sole director, with Reeves and Moss confirmed to reprise their roles. The script was written by Wachowski, Aleksandar Hemon and David Mitchell, who previously wrote the final series of Sense8 together. [17] The Wachowskis also previously directed the film adaptation of Mitchell's novel Cloud Atlas. Lilly Wachowski wasn't involved with the film because she was working on the Showtime series Work in Progress, but gave it her blessing to those involved for making the story even better than the original. [18] John Toll was hired to serve as cinematographer for the same month. Tol previously acted as a cinematographer for the Wachowskis in Cloud Atlas, Jupiter Ascending and Sense8. [19] In October 2019, Yahya Abdul-Mateen II was cast in the film, with some sources speculating he would play a young Morpheus, while Neil Patrick Harris was added in an undisclosed role. Jada Pinkett Smith enters negotiations to reprise her role as Niobe, with Jessica Henwick entering negotiations to join an undisclosed role. [21] Pinkett-Smith and Henwick will be confirmed in December, along with the additions of Jonathan Groff and Toby Onumere. [25] In January 2020, Eréndira Ibarra was cast, with Priyanka Chopra entering final negotiations. [27] The same month, Lambert Wilson, who played The Merovingian in the sequel, revealed she was in negotiations to return. [28] Hugo Weaving, who starred in the franchise as Agent Smith, was initially approached to reprise his role, but he had a scheduling conflict with his involvement in Tony Kushner's theatrical adaptation of The Vist, leading Wachowski to conclude that the dates would not work after staying in touch with Weaving for a while. [30] Laurence Fishburne later announced that he was not being asked to reprise his role as Morpheus. [31] Chopra and Wilson's casting was confirmed in February, along with the additions of Andrew Caldwell, Brian J. Smith and Ellen Hollman. [33] Joe Pantoliano, who appeared in the original film as Cypher, expressed interest in reprising his role even though his character died in the first installment and sent a message to Wachowski was about the possibility of bringing him back, but received no response from him. [35] Filming under the code name Project Ice Cream, the film began production in San Francisco on February 4, February. Filming also took place at Babelsberg studio in Germany, and in Chicago. [37] Filming in San Francisco caused irritation among residents and city workers after damage was inflicted on buildings and streetlights. [39] Compared to other productions, no second unit is required during the action sequence as Wachowski directs all the scenes themselves. [40] On March 16, 2020, production on the film was halted due to the COVID-19 pandemic. [41] On August 16, 2020, Keanu Reeves confirmed filming had resumed in Berlin. [42] In September, it was announced Daniel Bernhardt would reprise his role as Agent Johnson. [3] Principal photography wrapped on November 11, 2020. [43] Release The film was originally released on May 21, 2021, which will premiere with John Wick: Chapter 4, also starring Keanu Reeves. [44] However, the film was postponed to April 1, 2022 due to the COVID-19 pandemic. [45] On October 5, 2020, the film was moved to December 22, 2021. [46] The film will also be released simultaneously on hbo streaming service Max for one month as part of Warner Bros. plans. Pictures for all his 2021 films.
