Ona and the larger Husø Islands are separated by shallow 15-metre (49ft) wide water. The two islands are collectively known as Ona. The island is located 4 km (2.5 miles) northwest of Sandøya Island. The historic town of Ona covers much of Ona Island. Onacalven Cliffs, onna's highest point, is home to the Ona Lighthouse, built in 1867. The lighthouse and the small island itself have become well-known tourist attractions in western Norway. It connects the other islands of Sandøy with the island of Gossa in the city of Augra by ferry. [1] The island has a population of about 40, and the population has gradually declined over the past 50 years. Ona has been densely populated for centuries because of its proximity to fishing areas farther into the Atlantic Ocean, and fishing has traditionally become the only source of income. Recently, several ceramic artists have moved to the island. Ona appeared in an Allstate insurance ad in 2020 with Babe Rainbow's Morning Song. But the rumors around the ad seem more obsessed with where the picturesque island is, rather than raising low premiums. The small island of Ona Island, featured in Allstate's ad, doesn't involve much driving, instead it's best known for its historic fishing villages and lanterns. It is part of mainland Norway in the background. Photograph: Allstate/YouTube Screen Capture Company, Allstate Insurance, does not identify islands that are instantly recognized by many Norwegians. Instead, Allstate's message literally drives home the point that insurance rates can be fixed on the amount they drive (standard practice, Norway). So if you don't have to drive (for example on a small island), you can save 50%. It's not to mention that the island, where a young man appears to be driving through a stunning coastal landscape, is not located where the U.S. company is likely to have customers. Instead, it is part of the island of Sumchein in the Møre og Romsdal district off the coast of Norway, located between the city of Alessun and Molde. So the answer to the question where is Allstate Island? raised by some of the tens of thousands of viewers of the ad on YouTube is Ona, and the lighthouse is called Ona Fyr. In summer, it's a popular place to take a boat, ferry from another island, or take several ferries from the mainland. And it's probably very flattering that it's suddenly Quite a bit of international exposure. Norwegians, meanwhile, can rejoice in the people in the commercials speaking English in Ona instead of the local dialect, and how gorgeous the weather was at the time of the ad shoot. Ona is often a stormy place, so it may be a place that insurers can really avoid.
