Zombie mode pubg

and console usually play more chisified versions of hit game modes. While the zombie way in PUBG sounds a little far fetched, it's one of the better ways to play. You're either going to be one of the zombies or you're going to be a zombie, but people are always going to be outnumbered by 1 to 5. Being a zombie is looking a lot easier at the start, but you'll be in serious weakness in the early game because people thrive in long-range matches. Getting into the first zombie match mode can be a struggle if you haven't played any other game before, though, and here's how you can join in the fun. How to create a zombie custom match in PUBG? Screenshot via PUBG Corp.Screenshot via PUBG Corp.Screenshot via PUBG Corp.Screenshot via PUBG Corp. Launch PUBG. Click play on the top bar and choose Custom Match. The panel on the left must be displayed with several game modes, and zombie mode will be there to select it. You can quickly create a lobby with pre-set settings or customize them at will. If you're setting a custom match from scratch and you want players to see it, you'll need to set it public from private. The server location will be the closest server to your location by default, but you can also change it if you are playing games during off-hours for your region. You will also have the option to select any map you want. If you're hoping to be on the human team, Weekends can be a great option, because there'll be less room for zombies to wait for an early game. The custom lobby also allows you to customize how many players you would like to have in the human team. The usual ratio is one to five, but you can experiment with all the crazy ideas you might have. Don't forget to choose your favorite weather or rainy night for the ultimate survival experience. Most lobbies turn off the damage of zombies to zombies, but you'll have the option to turn it off just in case you decide to turn against each other. Remember that custom matches don't match up and you'll have to wait for your lobby to fill enough players, or you can join another user. How to join premade Custom Zombie Match in PUBG? Creating your own match is not the only way to get into a zombie match in PUBG. When you in custom match in the Play menu, you should be immediately greeted with servers created by other players like you. If you have a hard time identifying zombie game mode from others in the list, then you can filter them by clicking on zombie mode from the left panel. Try selecting the servers closest to you for the best gaming experience and the advantage of lobbies with a decent number of players in them. This will allow you to skip waiting for new players to join the lobby. How to play as a Zombie in PUBG's Zombie mode? You may feel like your time has finally come after watching the years of The Walking Dead, but things are never as simple as it is on TV. While some players will find success in the early game by running around like maniacs to catch people, any permissive player who was quick enough to find a gun won't give you the satisfaction of being out of it. The key to surviving an early game like a zombie is through the formation of the horde. United, you're going to be strong. Divided, you will fall. Even if you don't end up going to it, staying close to each other will give you the best chance of a zombie version of chicken dinners. If you insist on playing like a lone wolf, the least you can do is lie down in the grass to wait a few laps. You'll reach your full potential when you can start 000 people in the corner. You can hurry up with a team that has a house close to the circle, because they won't have anywhere to go. Remember that you will always be at a disadvantage if you do not more than people for at least five individuals, as you can easily get a two-tap with head shots. How to play as a man in PUBG's Zombie mode? Playing as a man in zombie mode is closer to the core of PUBG gameplay, which makes it easier to adapt. The main difference is that leaving your brothers is more important to eliminate you. While a ninja can make its way around solo prey without your squad in normal matches, zombies can immediately surround you and corner you from the rest of the people. When you change magazines, you'll be most vulnerable, which means you'll always need someone to watch your back. Since zombies never stop and continue to run on you with their last breath, the smallest cover can make the difference between survival and see the rest. Always watch out for magazine extensions, as you can't have enough bullets in the waiting order for your chamber in the zombie apocalypse, and watch out for the position when you capture the high ground. While getting a bird's eye view will be significantly safer than running around with zombies, you can accidentally squeeze into a corner if you don't pay attention to how the area develops. Here's our advice to not only spend the night but win the match playing PUBG Zombie mode - tactics, best guns, survivors much more. PUBG Zombie Mode is about refreshing your Battle Royale skills. In fact, it's a classic PUBG with zombies included in the mix. A large number of zombies makes matches intense and surviving in these circumstances is difficult when the options are not in your favor. Here's our advice to not only spend the night but win the match – how to get into a match, tactics to play like a zombie and as a man, the best guns for the occasion, and tips for effective gameplay. Continue reading to learn to handle the ever shrinking map with zombies. Table of contents How to play as a zombie's main goal as a zombie is to determine the location of the player, expand the information among other zombies and collect as many zombies at that location. You must be discreet. Do everything that works for a specific location — hide around the corners and fit on the floor. And then all of a sudden you have to hit. A typical rundown match will be revealed like this. Human players shoot zombies, but unfortunately it's very difficult for them to do it fast enough. The clock is ticking and the circle is narrowing. Like a zombie, do everything you can to survive this part by moving away from the players or hiding in the bushes. After the circle becomes small enough towards the end, it is your call to attack the player. Keep in mind that at least ten other zombies must reach the player at the same time. This is a critical point that shows whether you have enough zombies and how skillful the other player is. Find a balance between not getting too close, but you're still close enough to run against the player for the final fight. And of course, your success depends on whether other zombies have managed to survive and get within running range. How to play as a man? There are some rules in this way that you can not afford a break. For example, you have to stay close to your unit. It's never a good idea to break up – in this way you make it easier for zombies to swarm around you without a way out. If your team is a man down, it makes your chances significantly lower. Also, as a man, you are renumbered by 10-50, so there is no time to stay around. You always have to be on the road and you have to do everything fast. As soon as the game starts, you need to mute every second – find a vehicle, a weapon, change hideouts and start killing zombies early. The more you eliminate from the beginning, the less danger there will be in the final moments. Regardless of your style of play, your tactics should be more or less the same. Keep an eye out for your surroundings and even if it seems that you have found a good hiding place in the corner, don't stay in one place. The best thing for you is the higher ground. Instead of risking getting trapped in the city, climb the hills or some other elevated area. Will be able to see the enemy from a distance and shoot off the zombie before they reach you. The Best Zombie-Killing Weapon in PUBG simply knowing where to camp will be relentless if you don't get to the best guns for zombie mode. Our list mentions only common weapons of reproduction. Here's what you need to grab based on usability, high damage, and fast shooting rates: S12K. One shot of a good shotgun in nearby areas is lethal. And when you have a semi-automatic S12K, you'll be quick to shoot and make your way through zombies. Five rounds of fire is good enough, but it can also be increased to seven with an expanded mag. If you practice your goal, preferably close to your head, you will deal with an impressive injury. Tommy Gun. Interestingly, Tommy Gun in PUBG is not the first choice for many players in classic mode. However, with 50 bullets in the magazine with an expanded mag attachment makes for a well-fitting zombie way. The gun goes beyond eliminating zombies coming at you in hordes while you don't miss time to reload. Micro Uzi. You're probably getting the hang of it – you need to shoot fast when zombies swarm you from all directions. Despite its inability to fasten its volume, Micro Uzi boasts one of the fastest shooting speeds. So keep it until you get into the fight from close range and get this room clearer later. AKM. The PUBG players' community appreciates AKM for the incredible damage. AKM is a good reliable assault rifle. It is effective in close proximity and retains damage even over long distances. If you can kill quickly, it saves you time, which is always convenient. The fact that it usually grinds out is an extra perk. The M416. The M164 uses 5.56mm ammo, which is quite easy, so you can wear more. This weapon is highly sought after, as its extremely low effluent allows for the control of fully automatic fire. It accepts various modifications such as nozzle, magazine, stock, lower and upper railway attachments, so you can get a good advantage over zombies. Effective gameplay SlogCoring a small group of people goes up against 98 other zombies, the rules are simple: people need to kill as many zombies and zombies must stick as many of them standing for the final rounds. So you need to do as much as you can to survive until the crucial final round. No matter how you play, make sure you're moving around the map or at least perform some kind of maneuver. Just to be on the safe side, try to move around at any stage of the PUBG game. People need to know how many zombies are around, too, so they won't catch you off guard. Although a zombie cannot prey on or use traditional weapons, their huge numbers can give them a huge advantage. While the round is still reasonably large in the middle of the game, people need to get rid of as many zombies as they can on larger For example, if you cross a field and notice a swarm of zombies from afar, you must take action before they gather around you and lock you up. -> Find your personal PUBG statistics! Tips and tricks to survive and Win Know to know the basic PUBG strategy for conquering zombie mode, follow these tips on the way to chicken dinners. Choose the right landing ground Similar at any PUBG match, your landing must be a calculated move. The location depends on your strong points and your personal preferences. Since there's no great competition for guns, you can land in locations with the highest amount of prey. Use your time effectively before zombies get to you – the faster you will grab your weapon, the faster you will be designed to kill the enemy. In the end, the choice is yours – just don't land randomly in a place where you don't know what to expect. Don't turn the ammunition while playing Until you're better off for clips – it saves you bullets as well as time. The rule of thumb in these situations is to make sure you have ammunition over 300, for a key zombie take out, towards the end. Pick up the dumped stock, too. Take the High Ground Prepare for an intense campaign Anything there is virtually no chance of you seeing somewhere in the corner – time is running out. If you find yourself trapped in a building, you become extremely vulnerable. If you and your teammates are loaded with ammunition, that could work. However, it is best to get out into the open or somewhere high. Use of a Hop vehicle for fast movement, which is essential in this mode, as has already been said. Besides, you can kill zombies and save the ammo by hurrying them up. If you're in a building, you can use your vehicle to block the entrance.
