It is an online payment service that works with two types of clients – individual users and merchants. The service is a joint venture of Russia's leading search engine Yandex (NASDAQ: YNDX), and Russia's largest bank Sberbank. Currently, Sberbank owns a 100% stake in the company. [2] With new stakeholders, Yandex.Money gained access to Sberbank's extensive payment infrastructure including ATMs, terminals, and online banking. According to a June 2015 public opinion survey conducted by TNS, 92 percent of Russians are familiar with the service, and 44 percent regularly use Yandex.Money to make payments. [3] The company's headquarters are in Moscow, Russia. It has branch offices in Saint Petersburg and Nizhny Novgorod. Ivan Glazachev is Yandex.Money Chief Executive Officer. He became head of the company on March 1, 2017. [4] Yandex.Money's operations have a Yandex.Checkout b2b service[5] - a payment aggregator for online stores and other businesses that require payment on their online platforms. Yandex.Checkout was launched by Yandex.Money in 2013. Yandex.Checkout is currently the leading service for accepting online payments in Russia, according to a 2016 survey by MARC. [6] With this payment solution[buzzword], merchants from around the world can offer Russian consumers the most popular online payment methods among Russians and CIS citizens in just one 'Pay with Yandex' button: bank cards, direct debit (online banking), e-wallets, mobile phones, and cash through mobile retailers and payment kiosks (there are over 250 thousand cash receipt points across the CIS). [7] Currently more than 76,000 online stores worldwide use Yandex.Checkout, including partners such as Skype, AliExpress (Alibaba),[8] JD.com[9] and BlaBlaCar. [10] Yandex.Money also has an e-wallet, which is the company's original product. Yandex.Money offers consumers an easy, secure, and reliable method to pay online on its own website[11] and mobile app. [12] The service hosts approximately 30 million user accounts with approximately new accounts are opened daily. Recent TNS research[3] shows that Yandex.Money is the most popular e-wallet in Russia: every third user in Russia pay by Yandex.Money e-wallet. [13] Using Yandex.Money, gamers can also pay for Nintendo,[14] top up accounts on Steam, Wargaming, Riot Games,[15] buying codes for Apple (iTunes) and Xbox. Yandex.Money became the official sales operator of popular game publisher Electronic Arts. Russian users can now purchase FIFA 17 for PC and Xbox through the service. [16] Yandex.Money also distributes Blizzard Entertainment virtual cards,[17] which give users payment options for online games Blizzard: World of Warcraft, Overwatch (video games), Heroes of the Storm, StarCraft, Hearthstone (video games), and Diablo (series) and is used for online casinos New brands yoo money press release Customers can also use Yandex.Money cards as a form of payment: Plastic and virtual MasterCards are available for release. [18] In 2015 Yandex.Money received MasterCard Key Member status. [19] As of 2016 Yandex.Money has issued more than 500,000 plastic cards and 11 million virtual MasterCards. Yandex.Money was one of the first to bring its users Apple Pay in Russia,[20] which changed mobile payments in an easy, secure and personal way to pay in stores, apps, and on the web. Customers can pay via Apple Pay by adding their plastic or virtual prepaid Yandex.Money card to Apple Wallet. Online stores and other merchants, which accept payments through Yandex.Checkout, can also offer consumers fast and convenient contactless payments through Apple Pay. [21] With Touch ID there is no need to manually fill out long payment forms or type billing information repeatedly. Mobile app More than 4 million users have downloaded the Yandex.Money mobile app. 35% of them use iOS devices. [22] Using the app, they were able to transfer funds through iMessage,[23] paying bills — such as utilities, internet, mobile services - making loan payments, accessing their most frequent payments, and more. [24] Users can also download the Yandex.Money app on the Apple Watch. [25] Yandex.Money yandex.Fines mobile app for iOS implemented a new feature, which allows paying traffic fines through Apple Pay.
