Get your organized thing with a Dressers drawer chest and drawer unit can help you keep your thing organized, easily found and easily accessible. Depending on your storage needs, you can choose between two to ten drawers of dressers. Or perhaps you prefer a modular chest of drawers that can be fitted with as many drawer units as needed. For multi-purpose clothing, you may want more organizational options, especially if you find your thing tempting inside the drawer. See our smart box to expand your storage options. Also, check out our clothes with a wide selection of drawers. Some dressers have a combination of small and large drawers for a wide range of storage options in the same piece. Keep your home safe Remember to always anchor your dress or chest of drawers to the walls in your home. Dressers are usually not a dangerous piece of furniture. But they can easily become quite heavy when full. Having a heavy dresser end and falling on top of you can be very dangerous. If you have children in your home, they might try to climb drawers while playing or try to achieve something stored on clothes. The best way to prevent dressers from tipping is to anchor to the walls. All of our clothes come with an accrypted security installation so you can easily anchor to the walls, preventing injuries caused by tips. Learn more about creating a safer home. Skip to the children's chest product list dressers and chest Drawer unit basket drawer unit StoryWhen your child starts crawling and climbing, the whole house turns into an attractive adventure ground. But, since the toddler does not have any risk awareness, the home environment can hold some dangers, for example furniture that can end. Sometimes it can be difficult to see risks at home where everything is familiar. Here we dismantle some of the myths and common misconceptions that explain why not all chests of drawers have been guaranteed to the walls. One might think that just high, narrow furniture can tip over – not a low, deep chest filled with Weight. But, if some drawers are opened, the center of the gravity shift and chest of drawer tips is more. Unfortunately, both children and adults can be seriously injured, even if they are fatal, if they end up under the weight of a fallen drawer chest. An accident can also occur because of a heavy object on a piece furniture falls down, for example, a TV. Heavier things, more serious consequences. Experience shows that it is really safest to guarantee all the furniture that risks tipping to the walls. When we develop our furniture, we do everything we can to make them stable and safe as possible. It affects the choice of materials and the construction of furniture. But, we haven't figured out how to outline the laws of nature. As is the fact that the drawn-out drawer works like a lever. Maybe you remember the principle of leverage from physics lessons in school? Otherwise, it can be described like this, although small weight can divert the center of gravity significantly if the weight is applied to drawers that are pulled out (or open doors). This means that a young child standing, sitting or climbing on an open drawer can cause a large chest of drawers to cope if it is not safe - even low weight loss of a child. Children are curious and creative. That's how they learn new things and discover the world around them. But, it also contributes to 1-7-year-olds who are more vulnerable to accidents. And the impression, aged 1-4, is most at risk of serious injuries. That's why the chest of drawers – no matter the model or size – can be dangerous if it's not guaranteed to the wall. There are examples from around the world where children have pulled out one or several drawers and climbed them like stairs, hung, heavy, or climbing into them. But, by constantly getting your chest of drawers to the walls you can prevent and minimize the risks for children exploring the world. It is not just children who accidentally end up on chest of drawers and risk injuries. Even as adults we sometimes open a few drawers at the same time, especially if we are in a hurry. Another mistake that we sometimes make is to put too much or too heavy things in front of a drawer. In all these cases, the center of gravity shifts beyond the base of the furniture and they tip over. Uneven floors, carpet edges or wall carpets to thick walls can also cause accidents to be unstable and tipping. Sometimes it's hard to know the potential dangers in your own home where everything is familiar. Here we dismantle some of the myths and common misconceptions that explain why not all chests of drawers have been guaranteed to the walls. No matter how logical this might feel, it's actually wrong. All furniture can tip more. They become unstable if they have open drawers or doors working as levers and move the center of gravity. produced when the tips of the furniture can be stronger and cause very serious accidents - especially if they are loaded weight. Low furniture can also tip and risk hurting a person. If several drawers are open at the same time, the center of gravity moves. And when too much weight is distributed from the chest center of the drawer, it More. A child climbing on it, affects the center of gravity in the same way. That is why you should always follow the installation instructions that show how to protect your furniture to the wall. As a parent, it's hard to keep an eye on your children all the time. Unfortunately, many accidents occur when you have no vision. Luckily you have a good possibility to minimize the risk if you get chests of drawers and other furniture to the walls - even in a room where children don't spend much time. It's all good. But, lacing drawers and doors cannot replace getting furniture and not eliminating all the risks. A child learning to walk usually likes to heal against the chest of the drawer by pulling the handle, and therefore can make it end. When kids play, they sometimes forget what you've told them. Just because they're older doesn't mean it's all safe. In addition, many adults, especially the elderly, hurt themselves badly, sometimes fatal, in an accident with ending furniture. Most landlords in most parts of the world think it's OK if you guarantee your furniture to create a safe home for your kids. But, it is good to talk to your landlord and perhaps explain what risks it has. Feel free to disseminate some of the knowledge we share here. More people than may think are injured each year in an accident with tipping furniture. Between 2006 and 2016 about 47,000 children under the age of 18 were forced to seek medical treatment in the US due to an accident with a drawer tipping chest (source: Consumer Product Safety Commission, Nov 2017). Holes in the wall are actually quite easy to fix – there's no reason to take family safety risks. When you buy a drawer chest from IKEA, you should always follow the installation instructions and guarantee it with the accomplished fittings. They are easy to install, and screws and plugs are included. Just fill the hole with the putty when you want to move your drawer chest, or move to another house. All furniture can tip more, especially if the drawer is opened and the center of the gravity shift. Low furniture can also tip over, so always follow the installation instructions. It's hard to keep an eye on your kids at all times. Many accidents occur when you lack vision. It's all good. But, it does not replace getting furniture to the walls. But, they are easy to forget. It's not all safe just because they're older. Even a seemingly most stable piece of furniture can tip over. People are injured in accidents like this every year.
