Zigzagoon evolution chart sword and shield

From Bulbapedia, the community-driven Pokémon encyclopedia. Zigzagoon is a regular Pokémon introduced to Generation III†. It evolves into Linoone starting from level 20. In Galar, Zigzagoon has a local dark/normal type. It evolves into Galariani Linooni starting from level 20, which evolves into Obstagoon when flattened at night starting from level 35.

Biology Zigzagoon is a raccoon-like, tetrapod Pokémon with bristles, zigzag-patterned fur. It has stripes formed by alternating layers of cream and brown fur. He's got a brown head with sharp ears and a black nose. A black, mask pattern surrounds his brown eyes. The upper half of his mouth is serrated, and when it's open, there are two pointy teeth in his lower jaw. His legs have three claws and pink leg pads. Its ancestor is cream-colored, but the hind legs are brown. The tail of his brush is sharp and bristly. In Galar, the oldest and original form of Zigzagoon has more black and white fur. Red eyes are surrounded by a black mask with nails. The black legs contain three sharp white nails. He has a long pink tongue that constantly hangs out of his mouth with two lower teeth in between. Zigzagoon is abundantly curious as he wanders restlessly back and forth while rubbing his nose on the ground in search of something. He always moves with zigzags. He rubs his hair behind trees to mark his territory, and plays dead to fool opponents into battle. The Zigagoons found outside Galar are friendr and calmer than their Galarian relatives. Zigzagoon is able to find items on grass or soil, including items lost. It is usually found in grassy fields. The Zigzagoon in Galario is known to be constantly on the move and never installed. It is believed that Zigagoon's zigzag movements from other areas came from Galar's relatives. They enjoy battling to the point that they often try to challenge others to fight. While this succeeded with other Pokémon, people instead confused it for wanting affection, largely to the frustrations of Zigagoon. Japanese folklore and legend claim that tanuki are tricksters, masters of disguise, and are able to shapeshifting, though also abstract and quillible. Tanukis are also known for drumming in their bellies with their front legs similar to how Zigzagoon has been known to do. The shape and appearance of Zigzagoon's body are also similar to some small breeds of dogs, such as Pekinese and Wheaten Terriers. By comparison, Galian Zigagoon seems to rely more on badgers than on tanukis, as evidenced by its black and white color. Zigzagoon's origin name can be a combination of zigzags (referring to the fur pattern and unusual habits) and raccoons. Jiguzaguma can be a combination of zigzag and W2o araijuma (raccoon) or 穴 (badger). Guma as a adjective is often used for mammals that look like bears.
