He pretends to be left, then goes right, then shoots the perfect hook shot - one that helps his team take home the title. No matter if the team plays for fun or shot in the big time, everyone loves bragging rights. This is where tournaments come in. A basketball tournament is a series of games involving several teams that take place within one or more days, the result of which determines the champion of that particular tournament, league, country or national competition. The sports association often organises a basketball tournament to promote sport and encourage friendly competition. Amateur Athletic Union, Youth Basketball of America, National Junior Basketball, National Collegiate Athletic Association and state school organizations are all examples of groups that organize and host tournaments each year. These associations punish events with official rules and guidelines that all participating teams play, and they often have local, state and national tournaments. City or city parks and recreation departments can also organise a tournament for teams in their local community. Some companies, like Nike, host their own tournaments that not only promote sports, but be a marketing tool for business. Other groups, such as Gus Macker, organize tournaments to raise money for charity. Of course, many of these events are organized in part by parents and coaches of children's teams and adult players in amateur leagues. But no matter who puts them together, basketball tournaments don't happen without organization and groundwork. Each successful event requires a lot of preparation to ensure that it works smoothly and to win or lose, everyone has a good time. While organizing a basketball tournament can be a lot of work, it can really pay off for your local team or league - literally. Tournaments have great fundraising options because you can earn money from entry fees, concessions and merchandise. Whether you're starting an event with local parks and recreation departments, youth or adult league, high school or college, these extra money will help keep your group afloat financially and help players subsidize costs or travel expenses to other regional tournaments. So, what is the first (and arguably the most important) aspect of organizing a basketball tournament? Read the next page to find out. Welcome! Advertising practitioners, LLC. While the pros certainly have a lot of talent, there's a lot to be said for young people representing their universities. They play with so much heart and soul! It's never a fuller display than it was during a tournament. If March Madness is one of your favorite times of the year, you're going to love this quiz. Answer our questions, and we think your favorite NCAA men's basketball team! Are you all Blue Devils? Or root for the Jayhawks? Maybe you die with the Spartans. Our three-point game isn't division I level, but we're pretty good at finding favorites. About as much time as it takes to compose a winning play during a timeout, you can answer our questions so we can guess your favorite NCAA men's basketball team. As coach Krzyzewski, we're really good at what we do. Come on, what do you have to lose? It's not like there's a championship route! Do we guess your favorite NCAA men's basketball team? NCAA tournament brackets are picked and games begin Tuesday. It's a great time for fans, and with the help of some Android apps, you don't miss a minute of it. We have apps that keep an eye on scores, stats, players, teams, news and video. There's even a game tossed just so can remain in the spirit of matches. The NCAA March Madness Live First stop is obvious: the official NCAA March Madness app. You can mark your favorite teams with score notifications, make your picks for the official Bracket Challenge, and reach news and video replays. The catch is that to watch all live streaming video games, you need to be paid for a TV subscription to access TNT, TruTV, TBS or CBS. Games that appear on CBS do not require a paid subscription, at least. Also, if you're outside the U.S., you can't download the app Download NCAA March Madness (Free) theScore The Rest of Us, theScore is by far the best way to keep an eye on scores across a lot of sports, basketball added. They have updated to add many new features to the NCAA. One is an irritated tracker, so you can find out if a lower-ranked team is about to bust your bracket. You can get a full bracket view to figure out who's playing next. As always, you can mark the teams and players you care about and reach the latest news. Download theScore (Free) Yahoo Fantasy Sports thing, yahoo android app will help you keep an eye on your picks, results and the latest NCAA news. You can manage your draft, negotiate trades, and deal with injured players wherever you are with the Yahoo Fantasy Sports app. Download Yahoo Fantasy Sports (Free) Google Now More random watching, you can keep an eye on what's going on in the NCAA, which has already baked your phone. Google Now can be enabled to provide the final score and game reminders in the notification tray. Just hold down your home button, drag your finger up to the Google icon that pops up, and release it. Scroll down, tap the magic wand below the Sports teams icon in the middle, and tap Add team at the bottom. Rince and I repeat to keep adding NCAA teams you are interested in. Download Google Now Launcher (Free) NBA Jam Okay, so it's not the NCAA, but nba jam is a fast and fun two-on-two basketball game that should keep you pumped for the next game. Local and online multiplayer is supported, with fast one-off single player games and long career mode. The NBA Jam is an over-the-top classic that basketball fans have trouble putting down.
