[4] The pilot of the series was released by Cartoon Network on 1 January 2005. After the end of the first season, Cartoon Network announced that the series would continue as an anthology series. [5] [6] The second season debuted on Cartoon Network on 6 October 2015. The third season began airing on HBO Max on 13. [7] The series is set on a gigantic, mysterious and seemingly endless train that runs through a barren landscape whose cars contain a series of bizarre, amazing and impossible environments. Passengers on the train complete challenges as they go from car to car, helping them solve their psychological trauma and emotional problems. Each season of Infinity Train (referred to as a Book, each with its own separate subtitle) follows its own story and set of characters, although they are all set in the same universe, and some characters appear across different seasons. Each new season has featured a smaller character from the previous season as one of the main characters. All three seasons of Infinity Train have received critical for their complex themes and characters, writing, uniqueness, visual animation style, and voice acting. In August 2020, Dennis stated that although he wanted to do more, most of the crew had been laid off and that the series was in danger of not being renewed for the fourth season, because of HBO Max's concern that the show's stories and themes were too dark and unfort careable for children. [8] [9] [10] The Synopsis Series is set on a seemingly endless train that travels through a barren landscape; The cars in the train contain a number of bizarre and amazing environments. The passengers on the train are people it picks up who have unresolved emotional problems or trauma. As they travel through the train's cars, passengers' adventures allow them to confront and solve their emotional problems, represented by a glowing number on their hand that crashes as they confront these problems. When they solve their problems and their number reaches zero, a portal opens and they are able to leave the train and return home. The first season focuses on Tulip Olsen, a girl struggling with her parents' latest divorce. She is accompanied by a small, confused robot named One-One, and Atticus, the ruler of a kingdom of talking corgis. Eventually, she uncovers many of the train's secrets and confronts Amelia, a passenger who, instead of solving her trauma from her husband's death, has usurped the role of conductor from One-One and tried to take control of the train. Before she leaves the train, Tulip persuades Amelia to try to adapt to the changes in her life. In a first season episode, Tulip unleashes his own reflection from the mirror world, and the two part ways. The second season focuses on the liberated Mirror Tulip (MT), now on the run from enforcers trying to execute her as punishment for giving up her role as Tulip's reflection. She joins forces with Jesse, a new train passenger, as well as Alan Dracula, a quiet deer with a variety of powers. She helps Jesse leave the train by learning how to stand up for himself, and he returns to the train to help her escape to the outside world as well. The third season centers on Grace and Simon, the heads of a gang of rogue passengers who vandalize the train and attack its residents to keep their numbers high. Traveling with a young girl named Hazel and her gorilla friend Tuba makes Grace more sympathetic to the train's occupants. After Simon kills Tuba, it's revealed that Hazel herself is one of Amelia's creations, and Grace realizes what she thought she knew about the train is wrong. In the end, after fighting off Simon's attempt to usurp control, Grace tries to look up to and repair her flaws. She is analytical, down to earth, and determined to get off the train. Naomi Hansen and Lily Sanfelippo voice younger versions of Tulip, respectively, at age 5 and from 6 to 8 years. One-One – A spherical robot consisting of two separate hemisphere-shaped robots. In Book 1, One-One accompanies Tulip on his journey and finally learns that it is the train's rightful conductor. At the end of book 1, One-One resumes its duties as conductor and oversees the operation of the train and passengers. Glad-One (Jeremy Crutchley) - The exuberant and upbeat part of One-One. Sad-One (Owen Dennis) - The morose and pessimistic part of One-One. Atticus (Ernie Hudson) - A talking Corgi and the King of Corginia, one of the train cars. He accompanies Tulip on her journey. Book 2 - Cracked Reflection MT (Ashley Johnson) - Tulip's reflection, liberated from the mirrored world of Tulip in an episode of Book 1. At the beginning Book 2, she has been living on the train as a fugitive from the reflection police. She accompanies Jesse on his journey through the train while struggling with his sense of identity as an independent person, rather than Tulip's reflection or a construction of the train. After leaving the train at the end of Book 2, she names herself Lake. Jesse Cosay (Robbie Daymond) - A passenger who becomes MT's friend and helps her escape the train. He is relaxed and friendly, but finds it hard to resist peer pressure; his experience on the train teaches him to stand up for his friends. Alan Dracula - A magical white-tailed deer, a denizen of the train that accompanies MT and Jesse. Book 3 - Cult of the Conductor Grace Monroe (Kirby Howell-Baptiste) - The young adult leader of Apex, a gang of passengers who aim to increase their numbers to remain on the train indefinitely, and believe One-One to be an impostor who usurped the role of conductor. After appearing as a secondary antagonist in Book 2, Grace returns as one of the main characters in Book 3, where she gradually begins to see the error in her ways and decides to try to solve her mistakes. Brooke Singleton voices Grace as child Simon Laurent (Kyle McCarley) - Grace's second-in-command and best friend, who first appears alongside her in Book 2. Although the two are very close, they gradually drift apart during Book 3, due to Simon's sociopathic and murderous behavior and his unwillingness to acknowledge his mistakes and learn from them. Samuel Faraci voices Simon as child Hazel (Isabella Abiera) - A 6-year-old girl who travels the train. Although she has a number on hand, it does not glow; unknown to her, she is actually a denizen of the train created by Amelia's experiments. Tuba (Diane Delano) - Hazel's gorilla friend and protector, a denizen of the train. Recurring character The Cat (Kate Mulgrew) - A talking cat who is a collector and con artist. In book 1, she is an agent for Amelia; In Book 2, she runs a carnival. Book 3 reveals that her name is Samantha, and she was Simon's companion when he first boarded the train. [11] (Recurring Book 1 and Book 3; Guest Book 2) Randall (Rhys Darby) – A sentient floating person who tries to build a business involving the distribution of Donut Holer (which is just a regular pipe used to poke a hole through various objects) with his duplicates, which he creates at will, as suggested by The Cat. He helps Tulip steal the One-One back from The Cat in The Beach Car. (Recurring Book 1; Guest Book 2 and Book 3) Amelia Hughes (Lena Headey) - A passenger who overturned One-One and usurped her position as conductor, hoping to use the train to recreate her dead husband Alrick Timmens (voiced by Matthew Rhys). In book 3, Amelia works with One-One to make up for it and undo the mistakes she made on the train. (Recurring book 1 and book 3) Steward (voiced by Ashley Johnson) - A menacing robot that helps the conductor. (Recurring Book 1; Cameos Book 2 and Book 3) Ghoms (Dee Bradley Baker) - Dog/cockroach-like creatures that inhabit Wasteland off the train and try to suck life-power out of the living. (Recurring Book 1 and Book 3; Cameo Book 2) Megan Olsen (Audrey Wasilewski) - Tulip's struggling mother and Andy's ex-wife, who works as a nurse. (Recurring Book 1) Andy Olsen (Mark Fite) - Tulip's depressed father and Megan's ex-husband. (Recurring Book 1) The Reflection Police, or Flecs – A few officers are pursuing MT for destroying her in order to give up her responsibilities as Tulip's reflection. (Guestbook 1; Returning Book 2) Agent Mace (Ben Mendelsohn) - The gruff senior partner of the team. Agent Sieve (Bradley Whitford) - The more optimistic junior partner to Mace. Toad / Terrance (Owen Dennis) - A toad that passengers must kick to leave Toad Car. (Recurring Book 2) Nathan Nate Cosay (Justin Felbinger) - Jesse's younger brother. (Recurring Book 2) Lucy (voiced by Jenna Davis) - A young girl and member of Apex. (Cameo Book 2; Recurring Book 3) Guest voices for Book One include Matthew Rhys and Ron Funches. Guest voices for Book Two include Wayne Knight, Laraine Newman, Nea Marshall Kudi, Bill Corbett and Rhys Darby. Guest voices for Book Three include Rhys Darby, Edl Patterson, Phil LaMarr and Alfred Molina. Production history of Conception and Influences Prior to creating Infinity Train, Owen Dennis worked as a storyboard artist at the Regular Show. Dennis conceived Infinity Train in 2010, originally as a film. He was inspired by the feeling of waking up in a disturbing room, which he felt while on a return flight to the United States from China. Claims when he had woken up. I looked around and there were a lot of people staring into screens in the dark in this quiet space. I thought it was a little creepy. And it started a little bit from there. [12] Like the protagonist Tulip, Dennis created video games as an amateur in his teens, including point-and-click adventure games and mods for titles like Half-Life 2 and Unreal Tournament 2004. He has stated that Myst has been one of his primary influences since he was 13, and its influence continued in Infinity Train. [13] He also cites Doctor Who, Agatha Christie, The NeverEnding Story, The Matrix, Philip K. Dick, Star Trek Voyager, Sliders and The Mysterious Stranger segment from The Adventures of Mark Twain as influences, along with novels such as The Nightbirds on Nantucket and The Wolves of Willoughby Chase. [14] [15] Dennis has also described Infinity Train as Saw for kids, in that each season is essentially a morality game based on machines designed to help one overcome personal problems and appreciate life. [16] The Development Infinity Train has three staff writers who make up the most important team in addition to showrunner Dennis and supervising producer/director Maddie Queripel. Cole Sanchez served on the history team for Book 1's development but left to work as a supervising producer at Summer Camp Island. The process on each episode was that a writer would do a sketch, an extension of the outline, a script, and then would send it to a team of two board members. The 'boarders' would have 5 weeks to make miniatures, then the full boards, and then clean them up before it would be sent away for animation. The animation is performed by Sunnim Image Pictures in South Korea using traditional animation methods. [17] 2016 pilot This show was made because of the massive fan reaction to the pilot, and fans are what will help make more happen in the future. — Beth Elderkin, io9[18] The pilot was first published on Cartoon Network App and VOD on 1 January 2004. The short garnered a million views within its first month of availability and has since gained 5.2 million views by July 2020, making it the most-watched pilot on the channel, while two other originals, Welcome to My Life are the second most watched pilot. [19] A petition to Greenlight Infinity Train was made shortly after the pilot was released and garnered over 57,000 signatures. On March 30, 2018, Cartoon Network's official website launched a teaser for Infinity Train, confirming that the pilot had been greenlit as a full series and premiered in 2019. [21] [22] Book 1 Top: Tulip, One-One and Atticus as seen in the pilot. Bottom: the same group as seen in season 1 episode The Corgi Car. In July 2018, a sneak peek of the first season was unveiled on the Cartoon Network panel at 2018 San Diego Comic-Con. It was released a few hours later on Cartoon Network's social media platforms. [recion needed] A full trailer for Infinity Train was released in June 2019, which was unlocked by playing the show theme on the Infinity Train website. It was later uploaded to Cartoon Network's YouTube channel. [recion required] July 2019, the show was confirmed to premiere August 5, 2019. It was then released on the Cartoon Network app and website later that day. [23] The first season would be 10 episodes long, with two episodes airing each night from August 5 to August 9, 2019. October 2019, Cartoon Network began uploading a series of Infinity Train shorts to their app and YouTube channel called The Train Documentaries, which focused on One-One, which featured a number of cars on the train, including The Green Car, Tiny Wizard Car, and The Tech Support Car. Book A promo after the final episode of the first season confirmed the series would return. On November 1, 2019, the Infinity Trains website was updated with a new claw machine puzzle. Complete the puzzle leading to a trailer for Book 2. The trailer was then officially released the next day. [25] Book 2 debuted on 6.
