Modern warfare tracers not working

Some Call of Duty: Warzone players think the tracer rounds in the game are unfairly hiding their vision and giving an unfair advantage. In Call of Duty: Warzone, players can buy special Tracer Pack packages in-store in-game that add color to their bullets and smoke from their weapons. Recently, Infinity Ward launched the Purple Tracer Pack in Call of Duty: Warzone, which has proven especially popular, but not everyone is a fan of the tracer rounds in the game. Some Call of Duty: Warzone players have complained that tracer rounds unfairly obstruct their vision compared to when players are using normal rounds. Reddit user hamzah10 is one of those players, who noted that tracer rounds do so players can see barely when they're in a shootout. They suggest that Infinity Ward remove tracer rounds from Call of Duty: Warzone, tone them down, or do so so that their colorful effects are only visible to players who are using them. Start now Other players were mocked on the site and many agreed with hamzah10 complaints about tracer rounds in Call of Duty: Warzone. Some even laid out a theory that tracer rounds giving players an advantage was a deliberate choice by Activision to encourage players to buy the store packages. However, there is no real evidence to back this up, and it is more likely than just a check by developers. After all, it's not likely that Activision really needs to manipulate Call of Duty: Warzone players in buying microtransactions. In 2020 AD alone, Activision Blizzard has already made nearly $1 billion in microtransactions, so players are clearly buying a lot of cosmetic content that is released into the store, none of which gives players a competitive advantage. However, since tracer rounds seem to be giving players who have them an advantage, you have to imagine that something will be done to fix them sooner rather than later. If not, Call of Duty: Warzone could be accused of being paid to win, which is never a good thing. However, it remains to be seen how Infinity Ward could adjust tracer rounds to make them less unfair. Infinity Ward posts Call of Duty updates: Warzone frequently, so a solution could come sooner rather than later. As is logical, warzone's next major update should arrive on June 3, which is when warzone season 4 will officially begin. Call of Duty: Warzone is out now for PC, PS4, and Xbox One. Here's how you can get your hands on them with the Purple, Green, Red, Cerise, and Cerulean packages. While it doesn't necessarily give you a competitive edge, tracer rounds look great and make your opponents shine all brilliant when they get to the deck. Tracer rounds don't come free at the moment. They are typically displayed in the Game Interface Store section, as part of packages. You can access the Store by opening Warzone or Modern Warfare and scrolling to the right-hand tab of the menu with Only specific plans of weapons give you the tracer rounds, so you'll need to keep an eye on the section of the store. At the end of July, the Racing Series Mach 8 is currently available, which includes the Autoclave and Winner's Circle weapons plans. These plans have Autoclave is a Striker 45 SMG, while Winner's Circle is an M19 gun - colored bullets will only work on these specific weapons. The previous packages to keep in mind that they could return are the Nikto Operator Package, including a Kilo 141 plan called Cerulean, the Tracer Pack: Purple with a Grade 5.56 included, as well as the Tracer Pack Red Bundle, which has an FN SCAR 17 variant called Cerise. Cerulean will fire blue tracers, while Cerise will be lit in red. The red dwarf is also on this beam, and it also lights up in red. The Nikto package cost 2,400 COD points when it was active, while Tracer Packs cost 1600. Sure, it's behind a paywall, but if you want the flashy stuff, you often have to pay. Check the Only for you section of the store whenever you can too – you'll find packages that aren't available to many players. Pay attention to the credits of the new shotgun image: Call of Duty If you've noticed bright purple emanating from bodies in Call of Duty: Modern Warfare recently, it hasn't been a hallucination. The game introduced a package called Tracer Pack: Purple for multiplayer this week that colors the purple weapon rounds when fired from a specific plane. This is the latest in a series of time-limited color round releases during Modern Warfare. MORE: Modern 4Th Season Map Details, here's what you need to know about the new tracer rounds: How to get purple tracer rounds in 'Call of Duty: Modern Warfare' Scroll to the store section of the multiplayer or Warzone menu (any of the works), and Tracer Pack: Purple should be the first choice in the featured section. It costs 1600 CP to buy the package. It comes with two plans of weapons in which they can be outfitted around purple, as well as a knife called Mince Nettle. There is also a charm of an angry crab - alias Stabby Crabby - and a calling card from a woman with a thought bubble reading Da F—!?! Can you get purple tracer rounds for free? Nope, unfortunately, the only way for players to get purple tracer rounds is through the COD store, though you might run through the plan on the field in a multiplayer match. What weapons use purple tracer rounds? There is an assault rifle plan and a machine gun plan in the package. The assault rifle with purple tracer rounds is grade 5.56, while the machine gun is the MP7. Both weapons are popular enough that you can expect to see a lot of purple in the coming weeks. There is no way at this point to equip purple tracer rounds on guns in addition to the GRADE and MP7. Do colored rounds provide a competitive advantage? Not unless you are a big believer in mental advantages. The colorful rounds are meant to be cosmetic, but there is something quite satisfying about leaving a small crowd of purple above a fallen enemy that perhaps provides some emotional impetus for the players. As they look good, they feel good. Good. Good.
