Editor's note: This post was originally published October 25, 2016, and has been updated for quality and relevance. My two eldest children were both October babies. This means that Birthdays and Halloweens exist in the same month (2 weeks each other actually). My soon-to-be-6 year old son started kindergarten in year, so you can thrill for a super awesome birthday party. No pressure right!? So I started brainstorming how I could kill 2 birds with one stone (or rather 3 birds-2 Birthdays & Halloween costumes). My son is obsessed with nothing Ninja and fighting so Turtle Power seemed like a way to go. Boy/girl teen mutant Ninja Turtle party extravaganza! These thrifty costume ideas would definitely double up as Halloween costumes with a few bells and whistles. Read on as I share exactly how I created these thrifty Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle costumes (shells and masks). Not to get ahead of yourself ... I want to give a lot of credit to the brain for these thrifty turtle shells. I found this idea from the Made with Happy blog. I mean brilliant law! I ordered the whole slew of (ok 12) baking trays to be delivered to my door within 2 days. Click here for a 12 pack-perfect for party kindness or a Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle with a thy family costume. Turtle Shell Tutorial Ok steps here are pretty simple my friends. So all that mother, crafter, and other random who want to be turtles... follow these steps. Place the baking trays on the grass or drop with a cloth. Spray the back of the shell using the selected spray paint. I used light green and true green to add variety. Since the turtle party with half the girls and half the boys, I thought it would be fun to distinguish female turtles from males. Click here for light green & here for real green color. Allow the shells to dry for 1 hour. Rotate and paint the insides (esp outer rims-it shows from the front if you don't paint the insides! I barely squeak from one side of all 12 shells with 2 cans of paint. So even if you only have one color and plan on painting 12 to 4 cans of paint! Shove 4 holes in each turtle shell-one in each corner. Use yarn or string and loop and knot to start and bottom creates 2 straps. Enjoy your handy work! Get all the supplies delivered to your door (click on the image below in the upper right corner now for the Ninja mask tutorial Select felt squares colored in blue, red, purple and orange. I mean, we want to be an authentic Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle right?! Click here to get the felt squares. Cut out strips of felt about 2 inches in width. Mark the center of your eyes on felt using your child or separately as a model. Basically just cut 2 eye holes from measuring about 2 inches long and 1/2 inch high. I made a few adjustments to my first mask. Once I had the perfect mask, I used it as a pattern for the rest. Just trace the eye holes and hips and cut out. Use a sewing machine to fasten the elastic bands on each side. If you do not sew, you can also cut larger strips of felt out for eye masks. If you cut them long enough, you can tie them up. Back! For young children, I prefer elastic options. If you host a guest A boy/girl party like me, you might consider adding bows to girl masks. Eventually I decided to just add a bow to the birthday girl's mask, but mostly from sheer leniency haha. Now instead of bags for goodness sake, each little turtle leaves with its own tortoise shell and accompanying mutant mask! But don't worry I'll make sure you load them up with candies and cake while there too! And back to October kids thing... I prefer to believe my kids will be showing up for Halloween as Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles! I ordered some green PJ in 2 different colors to complete the look. Click here and here to get the same! Not ruling out my little one year old from all the Halloween fun, I even ordered this red coat as the start of a mini Master Splinter costume. Shop Costumes & Supplies Be sure to check back on the entire Halloween look in a couple of weeks. I'll even share all the details of the Mutant Turtle party.
