TypeUpright/Standard (274 pounds - TNT Entertainment) is an elegant aircraft introduction game that travels to five different time ages in which each has different enemies. The time periods are as follows: 1910 biplanes, 1940 WWII monoplanes and B-251970982 or 1983 year vary between the versions of the JET ROM and B-522001 UFOs.In the first four ages, the rear setting is the sky with clouds but in the fifth era the background is space with asteroids. PlayDuring waves with rockets like helicopters and planes tight turns with many double-back actions will make attacking missiles mostly useless. Focus on dropping entire swarms whose appearance by the sound of sirens points to the shelf outside the bonus points. You can also rescue flying paratroopers as you battle enemies. You must destroy 56 ordinary ships in order to show the mother ship, then you must destroy the mother ship by shooting it with seven direct blows. After you have destroyed the mother ship, all other ships will be destroyed and then your plane will be presented to the next time period. After you get past all five time periods, the game will start again with increased difficulty. Trivialn version konami, the fourth era is 1982 while in the licensed version of the century, the fourth era is 1983.This game was designed by Yoshiki Okamoto. Konami was hired as a graphic artist although it wasn't long after he was hired and asked to design a driving simulation video game. He didn't like the idea of a driving game but he loved Bosconian so much he decided to base his game on Bosconian without telling his boss. He was also smart enough to know that he would get in trouble to do so he also had his design team simultaneously create a code for the driving game also in case his boss wanted to see it. When his boss asked if the driving game was over, Okamoto showed him Time Pilot instead and his boss became angry. Okamoto asked him to test the site and the game was well received and the rest is history. Okamoto has only made two appearances while at Konami: Time Pilot and Gerus. He later went to Capcom where he designed 1942, The Ultimate Fight, a street fighting series of games.
