The characters then create a trap for the quick. Urak removed Arantor's blindness while Seon made Woan invisible, and he and Mrunk waited as Seon and Arantor tripped. The fast-acting couldn't resist, and the heroes managed to kill him. When the characters were able to recover the piece of ice, the findry appeared next to them immediately. Shrinking the piece, he casually broke it in half and knelt on the pieces, sobbing. His tears wept from his face and on the fragments, they slowly began to melt and grow, eventually becoming the subconscious (but living) form of Tessa, his lost love. With a smile, he lifted her sleeping shape and took her to a nearby cart, returning at times with his twins, a fully charged stick for slight wounds and with a decisive look on his face. He handed the characters the stick and then slowly confronted each of them in return and calmly thanked each one for rebuilding his life. Then the look on his face turned, and he said, Now let's put an end to these disgusting creatures and bring them back to the shadows where they belong. From that moment on, Madrin helped the characters as they struggled to overcome fae. When the characters interrupted or stopped six different carnival events, the cold rider appeared to challenge the characters directly, and with their appearance the characters finally had a chance to end the fae carnival once and for all. The stroms from the forest came a terrifying creature of ice and bone mounted on top of a rotting dead deer and creeping huge ice into a mighty glove. Impressive horns of jagged ice perched on the rider's handlebars, putting him to shame. In the center of the frost of the chest glaze is posed a crystal of pure sapphire, shining in the dancing light poured out of the floating lights. The cold rider stood on the ice of the river and screamed the challenge: Heroes, those who will face the power of ice and power in the north, come and face me and face death! The cold rider meets the heroes of the frozen river. The area he chooses is where carnets set off fireworks, and a few small piles of fireworks still poured into the ground. The cold rider used hARRY fash attack vehicles while he was out of range. He fightd to the bitter end. When the cold rider was defeated, the Eye of the Rapture melted into nook, and all the lights above the carnival winked immediately, plunging the stage into darkness. Faye's retired. They were defeated, but the city will never recover. After the characters managed to defeat the cold rider and liberated Sintira's fae from its evil influence, she prepared a special fiction that reversed the transformation of the ale ibbras into trees, restoring the restorers back to their original forms. They were From Mylon Rodham. Several hundred honorable have died or disappeared. Among the dead was Sheriff Deldrin Balason, and among the missing were Kimmy Everaker, Hollin Heberadan and Brimasren Hildricks. They serve as her mysterious ambassadors and often lead from other groups of dark fae, expanding their power where it is cold and dark. Appearance [edit source] Cold riders appear as heavily armored humanoids covered in rimefrost and creaking as they move. Cold riders range from 7 to 9 feet tall and always hit an impressive figure. From his head sprout two horns of dark blue ice, twisted and sharp. Wears a glaze made of a similar color of ice that looks just as sharp as the metal and unnatural for blood. Instead of eyes, they only have small whirlwinds of frosty money. Cold riders are always mounted on their wicked installation, which is a rotting frozen carcass, often the carcass of the deer itself, whose heart was implanted in the chest when they were created. [1] Habitat &ecology[edit source] Cold riders are found only in cold places. They are most common in Irissen, but often go further south to find other fae to corrupt. The cold riders were not born, but were instead created by the Queen of Irishon when a mighty fae was brought before her. She tears fae's heart apart and replaces it with a rotten heart of a dead deer. Then they are wrapped in freezing bulletproof vest, which they will wear for the rest of their unnatural existence. As creatures, cold riders have no place in the natural order of the world, unlike most fae. Instead, they revel in the depravity of others and the theft of human souls for their evil queen. [1] Capabilities[edit] Edit Source] This section contains crunchy. The elements of the rules should be set out globally and integrated into the body of the article. Ice regeneration Every time in contact with ice or snow cold rider can regenerate. Quicksilver Glaive All cold riders are equipped with special glaises that melt when used by non-fay. Dishonored Peak If ever without a cold, the cold rider can create a new one. [1] References[edit | source] community content is available under CC-BY-SA, unless otherwise specified. ECOLOGY Environment any cold organization lonely, couple, or cavalry (3-12) Treasures standard Cold riders are terrifying armored madness dressed in a slave with a pair of large crystal blue horns tilting their almost skeletal heads. Their icy armor and weapons are as much a part of them as their frozen flesh. Cold riders enjoy perversion, slaughter and the depravity of other fae. They prefer undemanding or cold-resistant horses, but even if they do not have access to them, their phantom ability to beweed, which ensures that it never lasts long without mounting. Cold riders are 6 feet tall, although their horns easily add another 2 feet to their height. I weigh 100 kg. Cold riders were once princes of the forest, honorary knights of willow kings, or another powerful fairy in the service of an eternal monarch. Challenged before the Queen of the Witch, these noble priests watched in horror as she chased her icy corns into her chest and took her hearts with steam before their eyes. In the dying wound on her chest, the witch queen packs the monthly rotting hearts of slain wigs, and then breathes life into the tortured Faye with an icy kiss. For them, a cage of frozen armor soared, and they rose like dead agglori. Their songs were stolen, and their love of green and beauty were replaced by a cold and unedning love for the witch queen. The riders are her knights gallant and her favorite servants in her war on the sun, the green, and all the things that are bested by her fingers. They revel in the perversion, slaughter and depravity of other fae. It is a solemn duty to bring fresh souls and candidates for the transformation into cold riders back into the Queen and they enjoy this accusation. The majority of cold riders roam the tundra, though they are sent south during the cold weather and the deep winter months to spread their misdeeds among Faye's other courts. They steal people's souls for their queen and are always in the cold surroundings and prefer the snow forests, frostfields and frozen peaks of the mountain. Cold riders are terrifyingly armoured dressed in a sable of frost, a pair of almost large crystal blue horns, flaming on their ice flames Steel. They stand somewhere from 7 to 9 feet tall and their horns easily add another 2 feet. They weigh from 200 to 300 kg. Their ice armor is as much a part of them as their rotting slander, and although ice steel looks cumbersome, scratching and scraping from them is move, it doesn't bother them the least. Their eyes and frosty fumes rising from their powerful frames are their most formidable features. Paired mini-whirlwinds of effervescent lath that swirl in their views can push the hearts of most talvars with a refrigerated gaze, and the steam-mist floating from them is often formed by their previous just traits, screaming in silent agony and curled in malformed wisps in the towering wind.
