This component provides Sass and JavaScript utilities by reliably building paths to component static assets such as CSS background images, fonts and JSON data files. This is necessary because the URL path to upload this property will vary depending on how the product developer chooses to integrate the origami component into your website. Overview If a component called an example of an example contains a style sheet that loads the logo as a background and that image is /img/logo.png in the component git repository, the path to be taken to CSS may vary: 1.2/img/logo.png - If a product developer uses a development service to pick up CSS, he must send a url request back through the development service, and you must also know from which version of the component CSS originated so that he can serve the logo image of the same version. - If the product developer has installed origami origami in the bower_components directory (which is typical) and that directory is the root of their web server public document tree, the default variable values will make subresources Just Work™ /resources/head/logo.png - If the product developer has a front control and therefore can map the resource request URL internally through different file system paths, and perhaps also want to rename the component of the component name to something selected, they may want the path to be something simple. You do not need a version number when loading from installed components because the subresource file will be part of the same installed package that consists of CSS or JavaScript. Where you need to solve the path to use the solution methods that take the path compared to the component root directory and component name as arguments: Usage Check how to add origami components to your project to start o-assets. Sass background: url(@AssetsResolve(img/symbols-sprite.png, o-air)); JavaScript import (resolve) from o-assets xhr.open (get, resolve(data/2013/12/monthdata.csv, o-weather)) URL routing is used as a generic term for any method used to specify the url for the resource, including copying the resource to a location specified in the URL. If you do not have a URL routing if your web server serves files directly from the drive without a routing layer, so the URL paths are linked directly to the file system paths, then the origami property should be loaded correctly by default if: you have installed origami components using the arc in the default bower_components directory; and bower_components directory is inside and base of your project public web server document. If you have a URL routing If you have a URL routing and want to improve the above (because it's usually not advisable to put bower_components in the public pane of the web server), you can configure the asset component to load the property in a different path. The path to a particular resource is created by default by the following connection: So-assets-global-path + {component-name} + + {path-within-ree} By default, the global path is /bower_components/, which provides that you will add the on-premises arc component catalog to the public Web root of the Web server. However, you can also set a custom path for any component, in which case the path of that component becomes: {custom-path} + {path-within-ree} Note that when you set up a custom path for a component, the global path prefix is not used (but still used for any components that have not set up a custom path). Any custom configuration must be set up before you add any other components to product sass/s packages. Global route prefix: So-assets-global-path variable (sass) and The default value is 'bower_components'. Component Path: By default, the component name and methods that accept component names and path maps are determined: Sass @include @AssetsSetModulePaths(o-example: '/asset/example'); Importing JavaScript (setModulePaths) from o-assets; setModulePaths(o-example: '/asset/example'); Use with development service If you do not want to publicly use local static assets, but you want to take advantage of the origami component CSS and JS in your build service, you can use your local property creation service. To do this, you'll need to configure the paths that contain the installed component version, otherwise the development service might provide you with assets from another component version to the one that you have. This is a significant gotcha, especially if you have non-shrinkwrapped origami dependencies. Make sure that the resource paths for your asset match the version that is actually installed. import {setModulePaths} from the o-assets collectionModulePaths({ o-example: '//origami-build.ft.com/v2/files/o-example@1.2.3', o-grid: '//origami-build.ft.com/v2/files/o-grid@2.3.4', }) Contact If you have any questions or comments about this component, or need help using it, please either raise the problem, please visit #origami-support or email origami support.
