The Third Empire Era has made a number of innovations in the series, especially with the addition of home city, which combines real-time strategy and role-playing features. The first two expansion packs, Age of Empires III The WarChiefs, was released on October 17, 2006 and featured three Native American cultures; The second, The Age of empires III asian dynasties, was released on October 23, 2007, and included three Asian cultures. The Third Empire Era sold over 2 million copies as of May 2008. As well as receiving positive reviews, it has racked up awards, including GAMESpy's Best RTS Game of 2005, and was one of the best-selling games of 2005. In 2007, Age of Empires III was the seventh best-selling computer game, with over 313,000 copies sold that year. The players start with a built-up downtown or cart that will be built into such an armed explorer, and a modest number of villagers. Players explore the map and start collecting resources used to build additional units and structures and explore upgrades or technologies. Actions such as training units, building structures, killing enemy units etc., earn player experience points. At the point of experience, players earn shipments that may be built into for tickets from the player's home city, which can include units, upgrades or resources. The advanced game is similar to most real-time strategy games until one side resigns. In the era of third empires, the player advances through technological ages, representing historical periods of time; These provide access to greater improvements, units and buildings. They include the Age of Discovery, which represents the discovery and exploration of America by Europeans and allows the player to explore and develop their economy; the colonial era, which represents European expansion into the New World and solves early military units; The fortress era, which represents the fortifications of the European colonies, opens fortresses and allows the player a more full army; the industrial era, which operates a strong economy, including factories – advanced buildings that automatically produce resources or artillery – and opens up all units and shipments; And the imperial age, which opens all the buildings and upgraded, allows you to send units and resources deliveries a second time. At all ages, food and currency rise to advance, with the exception of the colonial era, which costs only 800 people. Age price It builds up, but doesn't change between cultures. CivilizationsAge of Empires III allows the player to play as eight different cultures in Spanish, British, French, Portuguese, Dutch, Russian, German and Ottoman. Each of the eight cultures has its own strengths and weaknesses and unique units available only to this civilization. Specific units for each civilization are defined as Royal Guard units, receiving greater bonuses for upgrading the Guard in the industrial age, but at an increased cost.
