Ravens at Steelers: Game notes This game was originally scheduled as a night cap for the traditional Thanksgiving triple header, but was postponed to Sunday afternoon, then To Tuesday night and finally to Wednesday afternoon due to extensive COVID-19 complications. Some of the Ravens players on the COVID list can be seen below, but QB Lamar Jackson is obviously the most notable. The incumbent MVP will be replaced by backup Robert Griffin III. His last start came against the Steelers in Week 17 last season. He completed 11 of 21 passes for 96 yards and a pick with the Ravens resting the most major starters. The Ravens won 28-10. The Steelers' most notable absence in relation to COVID-19 will be RB James Conner. He will be replaced by the tandem of Benny Snell Jr. and Anthony McFarland Jr. They have combined for 262 rushing yards and three touchdowns (all Snell) on 77 carries. Pittsburgh upset Baltimore as a 4-point underdog with a 28-24 victory at M&T Bank Stadium in Week 8. Steelers QB Ben Roethlisberger completed 21 of 32 passes for 182 yards and two touchdowns. Ravens rookie RB J.K. Dobbins rushed for 113 yards on 15 carries. It is expected to be activated from the COVID list in time for the game. WR Willie Snead had a game-high 106 receiving yards, but is not expected to be available Wednesday. The Steelers, who sit comfortably on the AFC North, led the Jacksonville Jaguars 27-3 on the road in Week 11. The Ravens dropped a 30-24 overtime decision at home against the Tennessee Titans. RB Derrick Henry scored the winning goal for the Titans with 29 yards. Baltimore had won the head-to-head series last year and has won three of the last Matches won before Week 8. Ravens at Steelers: Key injury Ravens CB Jimmy Smith (ankle) questionable TE Mark Andrews (thigh, COVID) off LB Matthew Judon (ankle) questionable G Tyre Phillips (ankle) questionable G D.J. Fluker (back) questionable Williams (ankle) off QB Lamar Jackson (COVID) out WR Willie Snead (COVID) out RB Mark Ingram (COVID) doubtful RB J.K. Dobbins (COVID) doubtful Steelers CB Joe Haden (knee) questionable RB Jaylen Samuels (quadriceps) out RB James Conner (COVID) out Ravens at Steelers: Odds, Betting Lines, Predictions The Steelers (-500) win comfortably. The highly irregular circumstances will be far more of a disadvantage for a Ravens team that flew on Tuesday night, and Baltimore still lacks far too much talent. Although this is one of the safer games of the season, we will PASS on the chalky -500 prize and charge on the spread. Against the spread (?) Sure, Griffin was at the helm when the Ravens beat the Steelers in Week 17 last year, but Devlin Hodges was the starter for Pittsburgh. Roethlisberger will be the focus this time around. Back consider the STEELERS -10 (-110) and even alternative lines like -13.5 (+135) and -14.5 (+155). Baltimore has too many concerns on both sides of the ball for this to be a tight game. Over/Under (?) Expect the Steelers to be the only team able to put points on Wednesday afternoon, taking the UNDER 42.5 (-106) as a companion to play to the Steelers -10. They may come close to surpassing that number on their own, but they should fall behind late in the game. Want action on this NFL game? Register and bet with BetMGM. Now — three shifts and a series of positive COVID-19 tests later — they will finally play ... at 3:40 p.m..m. ET on a Wednesday and without Jackson (and more than a dozen players on both sides of the ball). Still, there's football to bet, which means our staff are here to break their picks. Ravens vs. Steelers Odds & Picks Ravens-Steelers Under 42 Stuckey: Given the matchup I'm analysing here, it's hard to Like the Ravens offense does a lot against this Steelers defense, so I've got myself here on the side of the under. The Ravens defense will show up, and I still see problems with this Steelers offense that run around the ball - aka where you can really attack this shorthanded Ravens defense. And they can certainly get on with Steelers receivers n.B. There are a lot of guesswork that went into this, but I felt comfortable placing a small bet on the under, although I wouldn't bet it under 41. Ravens +10 & +390 ML Brandon Anderson: It feels like the season is completely slipping away from the Ravens - and that was before that team-wide COVID-19 outburst. They've lost three of four (one of them to the Steelers) and just don't look like themselves. The offensive line is a long way from the 2019 version, Lamar Jackson isn't hitting his MVP numbers, and the defense has stalled lately. Now add all the COVID-19 question marks, and you can see the money pouring in on the unbeaten Steelers, as that line has doubled since the opening. But check the advanced metrics, and the Steelers are barely ahead of the Ravens in the table. Both teams continue to put up fairly mediocre offensive numbers and led their defense carry the day. The Ravens rank third in the points differential, behind only the Steelers and Chiefs. Baltimore is down, but not out. This is one of the NFL's sharpest rivalries, and it almost always does justice to the reckoning. Eight of their last 11 encounters have ended within one point, with Baltimore winning six and Pittsburgh five. Pittsburgh won the game a month ago, but Baltimore actually dominated the game. The Ravens more than doubled the Steelers in total yardage and were particularly dominant on the ground with a monster 265 rushing yards total and more than 10 extra minutes of possession. The problem was that the Ravens also had 110 penalties and four turnovers, giving the Steelers a win. The Ravens have a lot more on the line here because they can't even make the playoffs if they can't pull out of a win here. In between, the history, the high line and the way the Ravens attack manipulated the Steelers last time, I have to side with the Ravens here, even without Jackson. I bet the ravens on +10, but I don't stop there. The +390 Moneyline implies a meager 20% chance of the Ravens winning directly, and I just can't buy that. Pittsburgh has a long history of coming out flat in games as heavy favorites, and Baltimore has too good a spine and coaching system in place to be at 20% against anyone. I put a good part of my bet on the ML with such long chances and put my confidence in the running game and the defense. Have the '72 Dolphins ever had champagne on a Popped? The Pittsburgh Steelers and Baltimore Ravens were originally scheduled to play in primetime on Thanksgiving, but a coronavirus outbreak in Baltimore pushed the game back until Wednesday. After more than a week of uncertainty about whether the game would be played, the NFL announced that it would On. Well, the two bitter AFC North rivals will end their season series after the Steelers won the first meeting, 28-24, in Week 8 and are now 10-0 on the season. Kick-off is at 3:40 p.m.m UHR ET. William Hill Sportsbook lists Pittsburgh as a 10.5-point home favorite, while the over-under, or the total number of points Vegas thinks will be scored, is 42.5 in the latest Steelers vs. Ravens odds. Before you make Ravens vs. Steelers tips or NFL predictions, take a look at what SportsLine's Baltimore-based expert, Mike Tierney, has to say. As a national sports journalist whose work appears in the New York Times and the Los Angeles Times, Tierney has covered the NFL for decades and covered seven Super Bowls.
